QUENTIN ROOSEVELT'S grave, dug where he fell from his flight in the air, is said to be "lonely and undecorated." It cannot be lonely, for the thoughts of millions are with that courageous youth.

HIS father, Theodore Roosevelt, wrote the dead boy's epitaph, "He Has Outsoared the Shadows of Our Night," and a foolish critic has said: "Those words don't mean anything."

That epitaph, almost hidden by brambles, growing around the small tombstone, means that Quentin Roosevelt died for his country and that his father gladly gave his son's life, as he would gladly have given his own.

SOME months before the "big fight" Tunney told this writer, "As soon as I feel I can afford it, I shall stop prise fighting." Governor Cox, of Ohio, says Tunney will leave the ring now, and lecture to young men on "how to live." Tunney can afford to retire, having made at least $1,500,000.

BUT when Mr. Rickard says "I will guarantee a million and a quarter for one more fight," that siren voice will be hard to resist. For, after all, you can't get killed in the ring.

It isn't the kind of fighting Tunney saw with the Marines. It isn't the kind seen by poor cripples in military hospitals, that listened on the radio night before last to what was called "the greatest fight in a century." They saw a fight more serious. Their missing arms, legs and eyes prove it.

PRESIDENT LOWELL, of Harvard, gives this good advice: "Dont take advice too seriously." He tells young men they must educate themselves. "A college cannot educate the student." Teachers hand you knowledge, but can't make your brain digest it.

The worst of college is this. A half-baked boy lives surrounded by other half-baked boys, when he ought to be living among men, learning to be a man. He takes himself, the other boys and their opinions seriously. An able educator says: "A boy needs ten years to get over the harmful influences of college life."

WHAT IS courage? Horatius held the bridge with one man on either side, jumped into the Tiber and swam back to safety after the bridge fell. Everybody praises him.

Natalie Carescia, of Brooklyn, four years old, was carrying a kitten when it leaped from her arms into a bonfire built by small boys. Little Natalie dashed into the fire to save her kitten, was pulled out, but probably will die.

CHARLES A. LEVINE, who flew the Atlantic, a passenger in his airship Columbia, and then flew his ship alone from Paris to London, nearly killing himself in the landing, started yesterday on a flight from London to India. He was forced by bad weather to land near Vienna.

IN England a few weeks ago, Levine told this writer, "I don't intend to come back to America until I fly back," and now he plans to come back via the east. Levine has not always had smooth sailing with his pilots, but no one can question his flying courage.

WE may not like the politics of the Russian, but we are interested in the fact that Russia can fly. She might make up her mind to fly toward this unprotected country some day.

Yesterday Shesstakoff, crack Russian flier, finished a flight from Moscow to Tokio and back in his plane named "Our Reply." Shesstakoff flew the 12,000 miles in 150 hours of flight. Nations that can fly have a ready made "reply" to other nations.

COMMANDER BYRD, who speaks about flying with authority, says the real plane will be a liner with ten motors, going 500 miles an hour, able to fly five days without stopping. Such a ship could cross the ocean in six hours, fly around the world in two days. Millions now living will see that machine and greater machines.

AMUNDSEN and Nobile continue their quarrel as to which deserves credit for their dirigible flight over the North Pole. Nobile says: "Mussolini ordered the flight; Italians made it possible and built the dirigible. I ran the airship. Italy deserves the credit."

Amundsen, in a book just published, says he deserves the credit and that Mussolini admitted it.

WHAT interests Americans is that while Amundsen and Nobile, who had a long start, were getting ready, Commander Byrd, a young American, jumped into his airplane and flew over and around the North Pole twice, the first man that ever did that.

LAST STAND AGAINST GIANTS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

An angry mood was upon the Pirates today as they pondered their last meeting with the Giants and the final contest of the season at Forbes Field. Although the Bushwhackers were two and one-half games ahead of the McGraw entry and three full games in front of the Cardinals, there was a sort of "back-to-the-wall" feeling among the Buccos as a result of the disappointing happening of yesterday afternoon when they practically tossed aside a victory that would have placed them in a very fine position as regards the pennant. The home team probably will have to shake off its loose qualities if it is to cop today's fight.

The Pirates carried a five-run lead into the seventh inning and up to this time Carmen Hill, the biggest winner on the roster, had been practically invincible. But the Buccos went to pieces in the seventh, and ere the inning was over the Polo Grounders were the possessors of four runs.

The ninth saw the Giants still one in arrears, and when North Side Johnny Cummins, batting for Nor-

Taxi Afire In Crash; 2 Hurt

Two men were hurt and a taxicab was burned early today after the cab, driven by Frank Butler, 29, of 810 Lang avenue, got beyond control and crashed into a pole on the Bloomfield bridge.

Butler and John Gallagher, 32, of 2113 Liberty avenue, passenger in the cab, suffered severe cuts and bruises when the crash occurred, but succeeded in escaping from the machine before flames enveloped it.

Butler told police the crash was

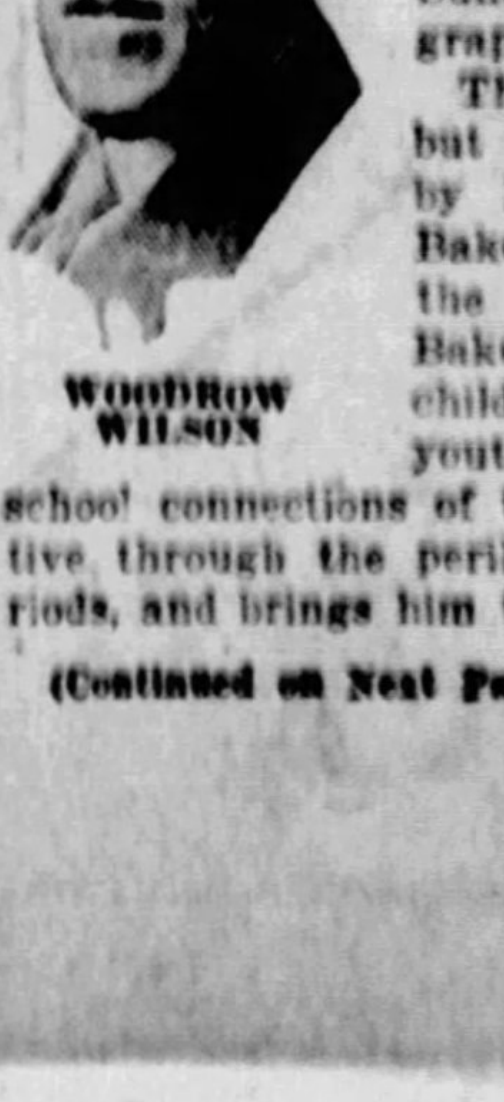
WILSON LETTERS TRACE HIS RISE TO FAME

Just how much heredity means to the young man is a much discussed point. Men who attain eminence and international fame have often been subject to rigors of life that only the few could stand.

To what extent the ancestry and background of Woodrow Wilson, the late war President, contributed in his life and attainments will be answered in "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson," which begins tomorrow in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.



WOODROW WILSON

This simply-told, but immortal work by Ray Stannard Baker, begins at the beginning. Baker traces the childhood, later youth, church and school connections of the war executive through the perilous young periods, and brings him to the maturity

I Won, Jack Says

By International News Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—"I still think I can whip Gene Tunney."

The words of Jack Dempsey were uttered with considerable vehemence today as the battle-scarred ex-champion echoed the contention of his manager, Leo P. Flynn, that he had been "counted out" of the decision Thursday night in the seventh round of his championship fight with Tunney.

Dempsey declared he would file immediately a protest with the Illinois Athletic Commission. Flynn filed a protest of the decision yesterday, but the commission would not entertain it because it was not signed by Dempsey.

"When Tunney fell I did go into a corner," said Jack heatedly. "The pictures show I was behind Tunney. Still the count was halted while the referee made me go into another corner. Those seconds were years then. They gave Tunney

Posts Bond In Audit Case

Joseph Gaussa, division superintendent of the County Public Works Department, late yesterday posted $1,000 bond for his appearance before Alderman R. C. Deever on charges of perjury preferred by Controller C. C. McGovern. Gaussa was subpenaed by Controller McGovern in his probe of county finances, and either refused to answer or answered unsatisfactorily, questions concerning the reported sale of county road building material for priavte road jobs.

The information is the first of many which will be filed against those impeding his investigation or who are revealed as involved in corrupt practices involving county

BOMB HOME OF CONSTABLE

PARNASSUS, Pa., Sept. 24.—A bomb believed to have been placed by vengeful bootleggers let go early today under the front porch of William R. Murhamer, high constable of Parnassus, partly wrecking the house, damaging several others nearby and shattering windows for a block. A baby asleep near a window was showered with shattered glass.

The Murhamer home, a two-story frame, at 304 Fourth avenue, was rocked by the blast, believed to have been dynamite, the porch reduced to splinters, front rooms virtually demolished and all windows shattered.

Murhamer, his wife and three children, David 9, Edward 14, and Violet 15, were asleep on the second floor rear. They were dazed by the shock but escaped injury.

The home of Millard McMillen, adjoining, at 300 Fourth avenue, was damaged $2,000 and occupants slightly shocked. Catherine McMillen, 1, asleep near an open window, was showered with glass, but escaped being cut.

Mrs. Alice Foster, wife of A. S. Foster, 315 Fourth avenue, awakened by the explosion, fainted. She was revived in a few minutes.

The homes of A. L. Rupert, 303 Fourth avenue, and of L. E. Rupert,

BOY, 8, SHOOTS SISTER, FLEES; GIRL, 6, MAY DIE

Lucy Constantine, 6, of 19 Joseph street, was shot and probably fatally wounded by a bullet fired from a 22-caliber rifle by her borther, Anthony, 8, today.

The two children were alone in the house at the time and when the mother returned, the child, unconscious, was removed to the Belvedere Hospital, Paulson avenue, where physicians said the bullet had entered her left lung. Her condition, they said, is critical.

A whipping said to have been given the boy by his mother after the shooting caused him to leave the house and a few hours later police had been unable to find him. The mother said the boy had not told her how the shooting had occurred.

A brother, Ralph, 16, was upstairs when the shot was fired. He found

Mansion Stripped By Boys

Damage estimated at $25,000 has been done to the palatial Ridge avenue home of Mrs. William Penn Snyder by boy vandals who have wrecked its interior and disposed of costly furnishings to junk dealers for a few dollars.

This was revealed today with the arraignment in Morals Court of Edward Breen, 19, of 111 Samson street; Jesse Jarvis, 17, of North avenue, and Gerald Coughlin, 18, of 2520 Charles street. They were held for court on charges of breaking and entering. Police are searching for other boys in connection with the wrecking of the interior of the house, which was done while the place was

"SLEUTH" GETS CORBETT PARTY'S GOAT

"Hey, there, you guys, line up here. I'm lookin' for a pretty tough criminal."

Jim Corbett, Fatty Arbuckle, Jack Lait and a dozen other notables who passed through here on the Corbett fight special yesterday were the targets for that speech from a capable looking gentleman who described himself as a detective.

In the train shed of the Pennsylvania Railroad they lined up. They were searched by the self-described detective and his bullish brethren. The detective further revealed that he was also protecting Corbett from the Slavish colony which had lost money on the former heavyweight champion's prediction.

"This," said Arbuckle, "is an outrage."

"It is," said Corbett, "two outrages."

"Three," bid Lait.

"Shut up," the detective contributed.

The search continued while scores of commuters looked on. Finally it ended amid many hurt feelings.

"Gentlemen," said Corbett to his fellow-passengers as he took hold of the detective, "allow me to introduce Mr. William Barnett, of Pittsburgh, brother and pupil of Mr. Luke Barnett, the world's most practical joker."

"Ha!" laughed Arbuckle.

"Ha, ha!" chuckled Corbett.

"Ha, ha, ha!" confessed Lait.

"And," said Mr. Barnett, "one better."

It is almost unnecessary to add that the scene was inspired by State Senator Frank Harris, close friend of Corbett.

CARRICK GARAGE FIRE MENACES NEARBY HOMES

BUILDING IS GUTTED BY BLAZE

Fire early today destroyed a one-story brick garage owned by Albert Bechtold, at the rear of 162 Spencer avenue, Carrick, and threatened nearby homes, causing an estimated loss of $1,000.

Bechtold conducts an automobile repair shop in the garage and the oil-soaked condition of the floor and various articles in the structure caused it to burn rapidly, the flames rising 30 feet in the air. Absence of wind saved nearby houses from being ignited.

Firemen were summoned by telephone and extinguished the fire, but not before the garage had been gutted. Two automobiles stored in the structure were destroyed.

2 WOMEN AUTO VICTIMS ASK $50,000

Mary Foley, a 45-year-old widow, asks $25,000 damages from Michael Verlihay for personal injuries received when she was struck by the automobile of the defendant last July 11 at Chateau street, near Hoffman street.

Marjorie A. Scott of Bellevue borough asks $25,000 damages from Donald H. Zellers, also of Bellevue, for personal injuries. Miss Scott alleges that she was a guest passenger in the automobile driven by Zellers last July 3. When near Dunkirk, N. Y., on the West Lake road, the Zeller automobile collided with another machine and Miss Scott sustained a fractured skull, a concussion of the brain and suffered facial disfigurement. She also alleges that she was confined in the Dunkirk Hospital by reason of her injuries from the date of the accident until September 10, last.

FIRE ENDANGERS ARMY DEPOT

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Fire originating in an ammunition pit at the Curtis Bay Army Ordnance Depot near here, exploded shells on a loading platform nearby and spread panic among residents of the neighborhood, but was brought under control without serious damage to the reservation last night.

Ammunition magazines containing thousands of tons of explosives several thousand yards away were quickly sealed by soldiers on the reservation, which, with the assistance of local firemen and a fireboat extinguished the flames in less than two hours.

CALIFORNIA'S FATHER OF GOLF DIES OF STROKE

LOS AN"E' " Sept. 24.—Edward B. Tufts, known as the "father of golf in Southern California," died from the effects of a paralytic stroke suffered last Tuesday on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club. This club, the first in Los Angeles, was founded by Tufts 30 years ago. Tomato cans were used as holes and golfers journey to the links on bicycles.

WORKERS REFUSE TO MAKE POLICE ARMORED CARS

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Austrian metal workers will refuse to help in the manufacture of armored cars intended for use by the police, the Austrian Metal Workers' Union informed the government today. The police, who say they need eight armored cars to prevent a repetition of such occurrences as the riots of last July, will be compelled therefore to order them from abroad. Each car will cost $30,000.

YORKE SUES IN BEHALF OF SCHOOLS

TEACHER

Alvin C. Yorke, head of the Alvin C. Yorke Industrial Institute, has filed suit for damages of $750,000 against the Bank of Jamestown (Tenn.) and 10 men, residents of Fentress county, charging that they have an organization so opposed to his efforts to raise funds for the construction of a school that he has failed.

SOLDIER-HERO

Sergt. Alvin C. Yorke, "greatest single hero of the World War in the American forces," according to Gen. John J. Pershing. Yorke, from mountain fastnesses, refused to commercialize his brilliant military career for motion pictures, lecture platforms, publishers, or the stage. He has devoted his life to education.

Peaches' New Plea Rebuffed

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Frances (Peaches) Browning has lost another skirmish in the legal warfare she has waged against her former husband, Edward W. Browning, wealthy real estate operator.

This defeat was in the form of a decision yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Seeger denying a motion by Mrs. Browning for additional counsel fees incident to an appeal of the separation suit won by her husband.

In his decision Justice Seeger, who presided at the separation trial, declared that there was not reasonable grounds set forth in the motion papers to believe that Mrs. Browning's appeal would succeed.

Irate over the fact that many of his subpenaed witnesses "know nothing about anything" when they are questioned, Controller McGovern announced he would start prosecutions to get the information he was seeking. He indicated the next sessions of the Gausa angle of his probe would be court proceedings.

He is now considering several other angles of the county's business into which he will carry his audit investigation.

John Torchia, county employe, who attacked Controller McGovern in his office Thursday afternoon, inflicting minor lacerations on his face, has been released on $1,000 pending a hearing on a charge of aggravated assault and battery.

VOTE COUNTERS' WORK CLOSELY WATCHED

The returning board started at noon today to canvass the official count of the primaries of last Tuesday, under the supervision of Judges John A. Evans and Ambrose B. Reid. Progress was slow.

Attorney Frank P. Patterson, a probable judgeship winner, was very much in evidence, looking out for his interests. The three independents, Judges Martin, Gray and Attorney Patterson, have a special force of counters who are armed with photostat copies of the returns as brought into the commissioners' office on the day after election, and are keeping close tab on the official vote as announced to the returning board.

Unusual precautions are being taken to keep out only those who have business in the room. The door leading from the room to the corridor in the hall, contains a stout new hasp and a formidable looking padlock, that can be fastened from the inside. The board will have sessions daily from nine until five.

which brought him fame and leadership.

In the first installment in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, and the succeeding chapters of this remarkable history, men and women of Western Pennsylvania may recognize comparative qualities in their own children—traits that have been so far unseen or misunderstood.

No other records can draw, in truth and clearness, the picture of a man and his mind, as the records left by personal letters. Woodrow Wilson was a prolific writer. From childhood, his pen was never quiet. To his family, his friends, his associates in conducting the business of the United States in a crucial period, he penned thousands of notes and letters. His manuscripts, his various files, all his memoranda are counted in the hundreds of thousands.

From these Mr. Baker gleaned his "Life and Letters," which will appear Sunday and daily—starting tomorrow.

PRIMARY TO BE PROBED HERE

One of the most thorough probes of election irregularities is promised here by investigators of the Pennsylvania Election Association. Thomas J. Walker, secretary of the association, is directing the probe, which is being sponsored by the Allegheny county branch of the association, headed by Grant Curry.

Employment of a staff of attorneys to aid in prosecuting those responsible for election law infractions at Tuesday's primaries was authorized at a meeting of representatives of the local branch yesterday.

Included in those sponsoring the local association are Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence, its vice chairman; Francis S. Guthrie, secretary; former State Senator C. M. Barr, Hill Burgwin, Joseph Dilworth, A. O. Fording, J. D. Hailman and Dr. A. Marshall Thompson, dean of the law school of the University of Pittsburgh.

Members of Knights of Malta commanderies in Allegheny county will participate in the laying of the corner stone of the new Malta Temple at North avenue and Reddour street tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. James L. Denny, supreme commander of the Knights of Malta, will lay the stone. Robert Garland, Clarence L. Igahr, William Doerr and C. J. Schmidt will speak. The new structure is being erected by Mathias Commandery No. 93, Allegheny Commandery No. 287, Ascalon Commandery No. 303 and Manchester Commandery No. 455.

Bodies of 3 Found in Auto

ASHLAND, Ky., Sept. 24.—The bodies of a man, a woman and a child were found early today in an overturned automobile in a ditch along the highway.

The cries of a baby attracted a passing motorist to the wrecked car. The baby was thrown clear and was expected to recover.

Physicians said the other occupants of the car had died about 2 p. m. yesterday. The cause of the wreck was not known.

caused by Gallagher's attempt to kiss him. He said Gallagher, intoxicated, leaned over into the driver's compartment and threw his arms around him. In the struggle, Butler says, his cap was pulled down over his eyes and he lost control of the machine.

They were taken to the West Penn Hospital by a passing motorist who summoned No. 6 Engine Company, but before the firemen arrived the cab had been destroyed. At the hospital it was said that neither of the men was dangerously hurt.

Four persons are suffering injuries today as the result of a head-on crash between an automobile driven by J. G. Ward, 52, of 219 Collins avenue, and another driven by Mrs. Irene Clemens of 23 South Main street, Indiana, in Bigelow boulevard last night.

The injured, who were taken to the West Penn and Homeopathic hospitals for treatment, were Ward, Mrs. Clemens, her husband, J. R. Clemens, and W. G. Creighton of Lock Haven. Police are seeking a woman said to have been riding with Ward at the time of the accident.

HUNT LOOT ON BANDIT FARM

CHARLEROI, PA., Sept. 24.—A treasure hunt for bandit loot is on at the Joe Weckoski farm, hidden back in the hills of Fallowfield township, near here.

Day after day for months residents of this district have made their way to this bandit stronghold to dig for that portion of the $135,000 stolen in the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation payroll holdup at Coverdale last spring, believed to be still buried somewhere on the farm. Some $65,000 was dug up by Allegheny county detectives. About $700 more was found by state police and three Charleroi men, but no trace ever has been found of the remaining $60,000.

So for nearly six months treasure hunters, who come on foot and in automobiles, have been digging, while the drab Mrs. Weckoski goes about silently in the same felt boots she wore the day detectives first visited the bandit stronghold, carrying on the work of the farm. Yawning holes about the property bear testimony to their energy, but so far nothing of value has been discovered.

Doyle Converses With Dicken's Spirit

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Wilkie Collins would have done a better job of finishing Charles Dickens' novel "Edwin Drood" than the American medium who essayed the task in 1873, Dickens' spirit has confided to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the latter announces.

A member of the seance attended by the noted spiritualist asked through a medium if Drood was dead, whereupon, Sir Arthur reports, the spirit replied: "No. I was sorry to go acrosos to the other side before I got Edwin out of his troubles. The poor fellow had a hard time. He is alive and Mr. Chrisparkle (a character in the book) is hiding him."

Dickens' shade denied having inspired the American medium.

A NATION'S WELCOME TO WAR-TIME FRIENDS

GEN. BRETT'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Plans for giving full military honors to the late Brig. Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, dead since early Friday morning from a sudden heart attack at Walter Reed Hospital, were being discussed here today by a group of close friends and associates of the beloved leader of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry Brigade, which included thousands of Western Pennsylvania troops during the World War.

Former members of the Eightieth division who served under Gen. Brett have been requested to meet at the University Club today to make arrangements for their participation in the funeral. Officers from Pittsburgh and other sections who were associated with him in the world conflict were notified of the meeting.

Tentative plans announced call for the burial Monday at Arlington National Cemetery, in the Virginia hills across the Potomac from Washington, where lie the nation's hero dead.

The death of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Brigade commander brings to an end a brilliant military career dating back to 1879, when, after graduating from West Point he rode into the west as a young lieutenant of cavalry to join the command of Gen. Nelson A. Miles in the Indian campaigns. Bravery and daring in action here brought him his first decoration.

Numerous stories showing an insight on his character have been brought to light by friends gathered in the capital to pay him the last honored tribute. Just a few weeks ago Gen. Brett was complimented by an associate upon his generally healthful and soldierly appearance, despite his 71 years. He replied seriously that his earlier life in the field was beginning to tell, recalling that in the Santiago campaign he had been stricken with tropical fever, and that in the Philippines he had sucered a prolonged attack of dysentery, due to the rigors of the climate, the food and other hardships. These things had sapped his energy and left him weak in mature years, he explained.

As a commander of combat troops in the World War Gen. Brett not only won for himself the repeated praise of his superiors, but in the eyes of his soldiers became a beloved hero and idol. Few of the general officers who commanded troops in France so completely won the hearts of men under them, and few of them enjoyed such confidence. An officer who served with Gen. Brett recalls the picture of a private who tramped to brigade headquarters from his regiment 10 miles away to see the general. Inquiries were made as to his reasons. And the soldier confided to the officer that he wanted to borrow 5 francs from Gen. Brett; that Gen. Brett was one officer in the world who would lend it to him.

Gen. Brett's troops were recruited mainly from West Virginia and from the vicinity of Pittsburgh. His death brings a pang of more than ordinary sorrow to thousands of former service men in that region, as well as to his hundreds of friends in Washington. Gen. Brett was a "Medal of Honor man," but it was characteristic of his modesty that he would never allow himself to be drawn or enticed into telling the story of how he won this most honorable and rare of American decorations.

At his mess in France the officers who were members of his staff, and who came to know him intimately, never ceased their efforts to make the general talk about it. But they never succeeded. There remains the bare citation: "For most distinguished gallantry in action against hostile Sioux Indians near Ofallons Creek, Mont., April 1 1880. By fearless exposure and dashing bravery, cutting off the Indian pony herd and greatly crippling the hostiles while second lieutenant of the Second Cavalry." And the same modesty which forbade his ever talking about his exploits as a soldier led him to reply formally, when notified that he had been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his work in France:

"It would have pleased me more had the citation recalled the magnificent fighting of this fine organization with a token that each one who endured the heartbreaking struggle might take home with him. As it is, I shall hold the medal in trust and always consider it the decoration of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry Brigade."

Cut Yourself An Extra Hour of Sleep Tonight

Pittsburgh will undergo its semi-annual period of time confusion tomorrow when, in accordance with rulings of City Council batting for Old Man Law of Nature, the city will return officially to Eastern Standard time.

Which all is by way of saying that when you go to bed Saturday night or early Sunday morning, set your clock, watch or what have you back one hour, thereby eradicating daylight saving time, and forget about it. Or if you happen to be one of those stickers for details, get up at 2 o'clock, the moment the advanced time period officially ends, change your timepieces and go back to bed to collect the hour of sleep lost last April.

VETS TO ATTEND BRETT FUNERAL

Scores of the Western Pennsylvania service men he led to victory over the shell-torn fields of France 10 years ago will pay their tribute at the bier of Brig. Gen. Lloyd M. Brett at the funeral services in Washington Monday.

Members of the Eightieth Division Veterans' Association, the Pittsburgh brigade of which formed Brett's war-time command, laid plans for attendance at a memorial meeting in their headquarters, 405 Penn avenue, last night. Many of these men will leave here on the Pennsylvania excursion train at 8:56 o'clock tonight. Others will go by the Baltimore and Ohio train at 10:45 tomorrow night. Members of the delegations will meet in the offices of Congressman Stephen G. Porter at Washington before the services so they may attend in a body.

Gen. Brett was one of the organizers of the association and was its first president. He was here early this month attending the tenth annual reunion of the "Blue Ridge" Division, and it is felt by many that his strenuous activities at that time may have been in part responsible for his death at the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, yesterday.

MILDRED HARRIS

Mildred Harris, the first Mrs. Charles S. Chaplin, is being sued for $90 by a theatrical agent who claims she owes him a commission.

Blood Test to Tell If Boy Is Kidnaped Son

By Universal Service.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 24.—Raymond Von Maluski, New York contractor, announced here he was making plans to have a blood test made to determine whether "Sonny," six-year-old mystery boy, is his kidnaped child.

Von Maluski came to Hagerstown from New York and met face to face the youngster, living for more than a year with Mrs. Rose Pierce, his foster mother, of this city. After seeing the child, remarkably like the boy stolen from his home in 1925, Von Maluski said he was not convinced that Sonny is not his child.

If the blood test fails, Von Maluski is planning to take the boy to a prison where Mrs. Mary Jones is serving a term of 25 years for abduction of the Von Maluski child. Von Maluski believes the child, if his own, would be able to recognize the woman.

9 LEAP SAFELY FROM PLANE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Nine Marines and Navy men made successive safe parachute jumps from a Ford tri-motored transport plane over Bolling Field today, setting a world record for number of 'chute leaps from one plane.

They jumped one after another as the plane, piloted by Lieut. H. R. Bowes, sped 120 miles an hour at a 2,000-foot altitude. They all landed on Bolling Field. There was no collision of parachutes in air.

TAX PROPOSED FOR D. A. R.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 24.—A per capita assessment of $2.50 was recommended to the thirty-first annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Conference, Daughters of the American Revolution, which adjourned here yesterday, to complete the $25,000 quota for the Valley Forge memorial window, of which $10,000 has been raised.

Allentown will entertain the conference in 1928 and New Castle in 1929. The following nominating committee was chosen: Eastern district, Mrs. Thomas P. Durham, Mrs. Oliver Meyers; central district, Mrs. H. J. Evans, Mrs. William J. Frear; western district, Mrs. Albert J. Sanders and Mrs. J. B. McKnight. These, with one to be chosen by the state board, will nominate officers who will be chosen at the conference next year.

GAS BLAST INJURES MAN REPAIRING PIPE

John Miller of 2706 Shadeland avenue was burned about the hands last night when gas exploded in his home while he was changing a pipe connection. According to a report to firemen, Mrs. Miller unintentionally turned on the gas while her husband was working with the pipe. The house was damaged $500, it was estimated.

LEESBURG MINER IS KILLED BY CARS

MERCER, Pa., Sept. 24.—Joseph Tunstall, 45, Leesburg miner, was fatally injured yesterday when caught between two cars in No. 2 mine of the Pittsburgh Coal and Limestone company.

Reunited by Rescue to Horse Sold for Auto

By VINA LINDSAY,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Sept. 24.—A near tragedy of the automobile age has come to a happy ending here.

Thomas Slaughter, policeman was called to a vacant lot on the outskirts of the city to stop a gang of boys from abusing a horse. He found the boys throwing stones at an emaciated old roan.

The boys scattered at sight of the policeman. Slaughter patted the blowing and exhausted old mare. Pleased with his attention, she rubbed her nose against his shoulder and raised her right forehoof to be shaken.

As Slaughter grasped the hoof, he gasped in amazement. Across the white stocking above the hoof was a peculiar jagged scar such as had been on the right forehoof of a horse he sold ten years ago when he bought his first motor car. Glancing up he observed another mark of identification on the horse—a white star in her forehead.

"Babe!" he shouted in surprise.

Babe whinnied happily in return.

Reunited, Slaughter and Babe went to the police station. There Babe had a dinner such as she had not had in ten years. Slaughter found Babe's owner, a junk dealer, and repurchased the horse. He will put her on pension in some pleasant pasture for the remainder of her days.

GERMAN FLIER OFF TO IRAK

ANGORA, Turkey, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Lieut. Otto Koennecke, German long distance aviator, hopped off this morning on the second leg of his flight from Cologne, Germany, to America by the eastern route. His immediate goal is Basra, Irak, at the head of the Persian Gulf. He hoped to cover the 1,050 miles by this evening. The weather at the time of the take-off was calm.

LEW SHANKS, EX-MAYOR OF INDIANAPOLIS, DIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Samuel Lewis Shank, former Mayor of Indianapolis, died suddenly of heart disease at 7:40 a. m. today. Mr. Shank had been active until the last few days, having appeared recently as a witness at the trial of the present Mayor, John L. Duvall, who was convicted Thursday of violating the corrupt practices act.

Mr. Shank held the office of mayor of Indianapolis twice, one term extending from 1909 to 1913 and the other from 1921 to 1925.

He became widely known throughout the country during his first term by his efforts to reduce the price of foodstuffs. At one time he bought a quantity of potatoes and sold them on the steps of the city hall. A drastic reduction in prices followed this action.

Mr. Shank was born in Indianapolis, January 23, 1872. His career included activities as a politician, auctioneer and actor. He made a vaudeville tour of the country following his first term as mayor.

Mr. Shank's death occurred at his home in Golden Hill, in North Indianapolis. He suffered an attack of acute indigestion early this morning. This was followed by a heart attack. A physician who was summoned arrived shortly before the former mayor passed away.

CHILEAN AMBASSADOR

ARRIVES HERE

Carlos Davila, newly-appointed Chilean ambassador to United States, has arrived in Washington with his wife and two daughters, Luz and Violetta. He is 35 years of age and the youngest head of diplomatic missions in Washington.

DOCTOR HURLED HER UNDER CAR, WIFE AVERS

Stating on the witness stand that although her husband's income was at times in excess of $1,200 per month, her furniture was sold and she was dispossessed for non-payment of rent, Mrs. Elizabeth H. O'Connor, of Crafton, recited a tale of abuse at a hearing of her divorce suit yesterday before Judge Thomas J. Ford.

Her husband is Dr. Harry T. O'Connor, physician of the East Liberty district and former medical supervisor of Allegheny county schools. Dr. O'Connor also has a reputation as an expert witness in personal injury cases.

Mrs. O'Connor testified that while her husband was employed by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company as physician for their mines at Avella, Washington county, on the occasion of a visit she made to him, and while returning home in her automobile, he was so under the influence of liquor that both their lives were endangered. The wife said upon their return home, the doctor struck her and knocked her under the wheels of the machine, tearing the clothing from her body and covering her face and body with oil and grease which he had taken from the car.

The O'Connors were married April 22, 1919, and they separated November 21, 1926. Attorney Robert R. Elder represents the wife. Dr. O'Connor did not contest the suit and his present whereabouts is unknown, it is stated.

The Plays — Stage and Screen — And Players

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1927

Alberta Vaughn Proves Truth Of Her Statement That She Is Through With Short Comedies

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.

ALBERTA VAUGHN knew what she was doing when she declared the day of short reel comedies was over for her. Alberta was wise beyond her years, for now she has signed with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the principal feminine comedy relief in Ramon Novarro's last picture. As I mentioned some time ago, Renee Adoree has the leading feminine role.

Miss Vaughn's foundation of playing throughout the country to small town audiences is a valuable one. To my way of thinking, it is possible for any girl to establish herself first in small run theaters and then go out after the big game. This Miss Vaughn did when she was with F. B. O.

Novarro's next, based on an imaginary European kingdom, is by A. P. Younger. Harry Beaumont is directing. Other players who will be seen are Roy D'Arcy, Edward Connelly, Jacqueline Gadsden, Marcelle Corday, Tenen Holtz, Anton Vaverka.

Chester Conklin, having a day off from his work as leading man in a Philadelphia comedy, played the judge in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Chester probably thought if Wilson Mizner, the famous playwright, was satisfied to do an extra bit in this picture it wouldn't hurt him. Mizner played attorney for the defense. He is a very close friend of Anita Loos and John Emerson.

Walter M. [illegible], who has been associated with the movies for more years than I care to remember, will return to production activities with "White Eagle." He chooses for his cast Alice Day, the little lady who was a Mack Sennett bathing girl for so long, as his leading woman. George Irving and Wyndham Standing also have important roles. Irving Cummings will be the director.

"Wild Geese," the popular novel by Martha Ostenso, is due for the movies. Phil Goldstone, whose quickies in Hollywood are the aristocracy of this type of film, is preparing to produce Miss Ostenso's novel. He will release his product through Tiffany.

Tiffany apparently is out for bigger and better things, for I hear that Dorothy Sebastian has been loaned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the chief lead in Jack London's story to be produced by this company. Montague Love, Ray Hallor and Pat Harmon likewise are in the cast.

The movies certainly have a hold on us serfs. The day of the fight, when Chicago was crowded, and I was busy as a one armed paper-hanger with the hives, I saw "Tillie the Toiler" advertised. It was playing in a little theater in Clark street. I stopped in the theater to take a look at Marion Davies and it was good to see her again.

Speaking of Marion Davies, I had a telegram from Bebe Daniels waiting for me in Chicago. Bebe said that she had been on desert location for her picture, "She's a Sheik." "I returned," said Bebe, "to attend the reception given by Marion for Lindbergh. It was worth traveling across the continent to attend."

Watch Doggie -:- Decorated Doug -:- Needs Barber -:- Kid, Himself

SALLY O'NEIL'S woolen dog is the watch dog of her complexion, purse, etc., for he is just a trick handbag for powder puff, hanky and change.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS as he will appear in his new picture, "The Gaucho," a story of South American cowboy life. Some gay boy in dress, the gaucho.

EVE SOUTHERN plays the part of the spiritual girl in "The Gaucho." If she gets into a tight place, those hair ropes ought to come in right handy.

WILLIAM HAINES, young actor who jumped into stardom in the last year, is being mentioned as title role player in a film of the life of Billy, the Kid, outlaw.

Woman Directing Clara Bow's New Film

Clara Bow's next picture will be called "You Will Marry Me." It had been expected that she would follow her successful "Hula" with "Red Hair," written by Elinor Glyn. But the scenario department decided the present adaptation of that story was not quite satisfactory and had best be postponed to permit revision.

The cast of "You Will Marry Me" will include Josephine Dunn, Joseph Swickard and Harvey Clark. It is expected that Dorothy Arzner, who was assigned to direct "Red Hair," will have the megaphone on the alternative production.

VERA VERONINA CHOSEN FOR BARRYMORE ROLE

Greta Nissen will not be John Barrymore's leading lady in "Tempest," his next United Artists picture, as was originally announced. Instead, Vera Veronina, the Russian actress who has but recently appeared opposite Harry Lauder in his first film, "Hunting Tower," will be Barrymore's leading woman.

COLLEGE BOY TO STAR IN FOOTBALL ROMANCE

The vogue for star football players in the movies, which was started by Red Grange's debut on the silver screen, has not abated. This week James Pierce, all-American center from the University of Indiana, was signed by the same company for an important role in "Her Summer Hero," a story glorifying the beach bathing beauties and the young college set, to be directed by James Dugan.

LEO MEEHAN TO DIRECT VERSION OF "FRECKLES"

John Fox, who probably will be remembered best for his banjo strumming in "The Covered Wagon," and Gene Stratton, granddaughter of the late Gene Stratton-Porter, have been chosen by Leo Meehan to play the leading roles in "Freckles," which he will produce for F. B. O. Fox will play the title role and Miss Stratton will be "Swamp Angel" in this film production of the popular Porter novel.

GRIFFITH BEGINS NEW FILM, "DRUMS OF LOVE"

David Wark Griffith has begun production at the United Artists Studio, Hollywood, on "Drums of Love," his new United Artists picture. The cast includes Mary Philbin, Don Alvarado and Tully Marshall. The story is an original one by Gerrit Lloyd. It was for United Artists that Mr. Griffith made "Way Down East," "Orphans of the Storm," "America," "Isn't Life Wonderful?" and other cinematic landmarks.

MYSTERY DRAMA IN BILLS

Beginning Monday, the George Sharp Production Stock Company in the Pitt, will present "The Monster," a mystery play written by Crane Wilbur. In the cast will be Thurston Hall, Anne Forrest, Mabel Kroman, Joseph Lawrence, Gus Forbes, Jack Willard and John W. Moore.

Joe Laurie, Jr., diminutive comedian, is co-featured with William Courtleigh in "Weather Clear, Track Fast," the new Willard Mack comedy drama which opens a week's engagement in the Nixon Monday evening.

Louise Hunter, formerly of grand opera, will be starred Monday night, when Arthur Hammerstein presents his music drama, "Golden Dawn," in the Alvin. The piece has a cast of 21 principals and an ensemble of 150 voices.

On the Keith-Albee program in the Davis next week will be Alma Neilson with Dan B. Ely and Dave Rice in a dancing review. "Dance Magic," with Ben Lyon and Pauline Starke, will be on the screen.

"White Cargo," which is repeating over the Columbia wheel this season, had a big success last year, and it will be presented by the same cast in the Gayety next week.

Fritzie White, Sylvia Pearl and Loretta Love, who play principal roles in "Ginger Girls," next week's show in the Academy, also will be seen in specialties.

The Wardon Brothers in "Footology" and other acts are in the Harris next week. The screen feature will be Tom Mix in "The Circus Ace," a comedy drama.

Georgie Price, in "What Price Georgie," will head the stage acts in the Aldine next week. On the screen will be "The Blood Ship," with Hobard Bosworth, Jacqueline Logan and Richard Arle.

Vaudeville in the Sheridan Square next week includes Hazelle and Katoff, assisted by the original Balkan Sextet, in an elaborate dance offering.

Emil Jannings is featured in "The Way of All Flesh," coming to the Grand next week.

"Two Arabian Knights," post-war comedy film showing in the Penn next week, is based on Donald McGibney's serial story. McGibney was in Hollywood while the picture was made.

Plan Film Sequel To Air Drama of War

Another big picture of the war is to follow the long succession of martial thrillers which have drawn increasing throngs to Broadway and other movie theaters. Paramount this month is to start a sequel to "Wings," the giant presentation of war in the air. The new picture will be called "The Legion of the Condemned," written by John Monk Saunders and directed by Walter Wellman, the same author and director who produced "Wings." Gary Cooper, dashing young Paramount star who now is finishing up "Beau Sabreur," the new desert tale by Percival Christopher Wren, will be starred in "The Legion of the Condemned."

SPEED BLAMED FOR WRECK

HARRISBURG, Sept. 24.—Reduced speed for fast passenger trains around curves was suggested by the Bureau of Accidents in submitting its report to the Public Service Commission on the wreck of August 27 of the Broadway Limited near Gallitzin. The bureau did not place responsibility for the wreck which resulted in the death of two railroad employes and the injury to three others.

"We are satisfied," the report said, "in the light of other accidents noted and the absence of contributory factors so far as rolling stock and road bed are concerned, that the speed of trains over the curve ought to be in keeping with the physical characteristics of the line."

The bureau suggested that an operating rule be adopted and strictly enforced, "would be an effective agency in sustaining a standard of reasonable precaution." Investigation by representatives of the bureau showed conflicting testimony as to the rate of speed of the train. The engine crew of the second locomotive declared the speed to be 25 miles an hour, while the conductor told investigators the rate of speed was 40 miles or more an hour.

The investigation made by the bureau was comprehensive in scope, the report said. Inspections were made of the roadbed, the train and employes interviewed. When no defects were found in the equipment the investigators looked elsewhere for the cause of the accident. Following this phase of the probe the bureau in its report suggested a lower rate of speed over the curve where two passenger trains were derailed. One in April, 1921, and the other in December, 1925.

RECORD WEEK IN AUTO THEFTS

A record for automobile stealing was established here during last week, reports of thefts to the police motorcycle division indicated. One hundred ten machines were reported stolen. Of this number 55 were recovered by police, most of them having been stolen by joy-riders, who abandoned them within a few hours.

SEVERAL TO FILL JUDGE GARY'S DUTIES

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—First official disclosure that the extensive duties of the late Elbert H. Gary as chief executive and directing officer of the United States Steel Corporation are to be divided among several successors was forthcoming in announcement that new presidents have been elected for two subsidiaries of the steel corporation. Both these presidencies formerly were filled by Judge Gary.

The new presidents are S. B. Sheldon, elected president of the Minnesota Steel Company, and L. H. Korndorff, new president of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company. Both were formerly vice presidents of their respective companies, subsidiaries of the steel corporation.

It has been generally understood for several weeks in the financial district that the principal offices occupied by Judge Gary since formation of the giant corporation 26 years ago, were to be divided among several men. The choice of successors in the subsidiary companies is not considered a significant indication of the possible successors to the two important offices of chairmen of the two dominant bodies, the board of directors and the finance committee. Judge Gary never was active in the operating end of the business.

James A. Farrell, president of the steel corporation, will probably be appointed chief executive officer in charge of all operations, in the opinion of Wall Street. At the same time another man, prominent in the financial world, is expected to be appointed chairman of the finance committee.

WILL IMPROVE COUNTY ROADS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 24—(AP.)—Authorization of highway improvements under the state reward plan in the following counties was announced yesterday at the State Department of highways:

Allegheny county: Sewickley Heights township—Grading, draining and surfacing 1 1/2 miles of road, beginning at the end of the Mason extension and extending north-easterly to the Franklin township line at a cost of $2,040. Kilbuck township—Grading and draining one and one-half miles beginning at northern boundary line of Dixmont Insane Asylum property and extending in a northerly direction to the Kilbuck-Ohio township line at a cost of $3,200. Findley township—Construction of a reinforced concrete bridge over a branch of Potato Run three-fourths of a mile south of Verner.

Beaver county: Potter township—Grading, draining and surfacing two and one-half miles of road, starting at Route 115 at Potter School No. 1 and extending to Center township line by D. B. Dead's farm at a cost of $3,547. Rochester township—Grading and draining one and one-half miles of road, beginning at Rochester borough line on Adams street, thence east through a village known as the C. C. Nose plan in Rochester township, at a cost of $462.50; surfacing of one-half mile of road beginning at Rochester borough line on Adams street, thence east through the village known as Nose, cost $690.

Clarion county: Washington township—Construction of 2,400 feet of road, beginning at the Knox township line and extending towards Route 92 at the J. W. McKissock's farm, cost $556.

Lebanon—East Hanover township, 11,625 feet; D. L. Risser, Lebanon, $92,971.

McKean—Ceres township, 11,112 feet; Sharpe & Kratzer, Galeton, $120,024.

Westmoreland—Salem township, 14,095 feet; M. E. McMahon, Delmont, $85,140. Adamsburg borough and Hempfield township, 12,145 feet; Yost Construction Company, Pittsburgh, $86,291.

Short Skirts, Low Necks, Taboo In Hungary

BUDAPEST, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—What the well-dressed girl students in night schools shall wear this season has been decided by the Hungarian government.

A government order, issued today, decrees that all girls between the ages of 14 and 18 who attend night schools in any part of the country shall not wear skirts that fall less than four inches below the knee.

The order also prohibits the students from wearing low-necked dresses, silk or flesh-colored stockings or short sleeves. Skirts must be uniformly blue and pleated, and in cases of girls under 14 must at least cover the knee.

The minister of education said these restrictions have become imperative in order to offset increasingly immoral tendencies in Hungary, even among young girls.

Liberty or Death! Plea Of Mrs. Sweetin

By Universal Service.

MT. VERNON, Ill., Sept. 24.—"I don't want you to send me back to prison, away from my children. If you think I killed my husband, don't send me back to prison, send me to my death."

With this dramatic appeal to the jury, Elsie Sweetin, on trial for the poisoning of her husband, left the witness stand.

Mrs. Sweetin had concluded all her testimony and had been asked by Defense Attorney Robert E. Smith if there was anything further that she desired to tell the jury. Answering that there was, she broke into convulsive sobs and made her dramatic appeal.

Somewhat taken back, apparently by the sadness of the scene, the members of the jury appeared embarrassed. But there was no indication that they had been particularly impressed by the appeal.

The woman's testimony, in the main, was a repetition of the story she had poured into the ears of Judge Roy E. Pearce.

The defense rested its case and the prosecution will call a few witnesses in rebuttal before the arguments to the jury begin.

Ma's Going to Kill You, Cries Girl; Saves Dad

By Universal Service.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Hilda Burke saved the life of her father in a dramatic manner. William H. Patterson, president of the Standard Sheet Metal Works, was sitting in his office when his daughter rushed in.

"Quick, papa, run! Mama's going to kill you," she screamed.

Patterson, separated from his wife five years, started to run.

His wife, closely following the daughter, opened fire and, although the girl grabbed the gun, sped three shots after the fleeing husband.

He was only scratched.

CHINESE ARMY'S CHIEF ON WAY TO U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The Examiner says it has learned that Gene Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese nationalist military leader, is on his way to San Francisco aboard the Japanese liner Korea Maru, due next Thursday.

The newspaper says it obtained the information from travelers arriving here from the Orient yesterday aboard the American liner President McKinley.

This is in conflict with dispatches from Shanghai Wednesday night saying Miss Meiling Soong, a graduate of Wellesley College and considered one of the most beautiful Chinese girls in the international city, had announced her engagement to the young general. Miss Soong at that time reported Gen. Chiang was in the interior and said he would come to Shanghai soon for the wedding.

The woman, who arrived here recently under the name of Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek and was accepted in Chinese circles as the wife of the noted general, became the center of a controversy later when a dispatch from Shanghai quoted Chiang as saying he was not married. She went to Los Angeles and then announced her departure for New York, but nothing since has been heard from her. Many San Francisco Chinese stoutly maintain that she really was Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek.

CHINESE BANDITS ROB DIPLOMATS

By Universal Service.
Special Cable Dispatch.

PEKING, Sept. 24.—The Belgian and Czecho-Slovak ministers to China were held up and robber by armed Chinese bandits within an hour's ride of the capitol. Chang Tso-Lin, Marshal and military overlord of North China, made immediate apologies for the outrage.

The diplomats were robbed of clothing, money and jewelry.

SHOT 24 HOURS AFTER WEDDING PRIZE BEAUTY

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 24.—Within 24 hours after his marriage, Graeme C. McCoy, saxophone player, was dead in the home of his bride here, a bullet wound in his head. He is believed to have shot himself accidentally. McCoy married Margaret Clemens, a pianist, at Peoria. The bride recently won a beauty contest conducted here by theaters.

Beginning Monday—
The Annual Cooking School
M. Roussey, French Chef
Will Demonstrate the Improved Method of Waterless Cooking
Daily at 1 P. M., Auditorium

MONSIEUR ROUSSEY, widely experienced in hotels and clubs, both here and abroad, is well qualified to speak on a subject that is near to the heart of all who love cooking.

His lectures and demonstrations will initiate interested women in the fine art of preparing dinners, luncheons, individual dishes, garnishes, etc., according to the professional standards of finest dining places. Many recipes are of his own origination, containing that bit of artful individuality which seems to reflect all that might be expected of a French chef.

Waterless Cooking will be explained. This form of preparing food has much to commend it, retaining the natural juices usually wasted in other methods, and improving the flavor, giving a new taste to old and familiar dishes.

Program for Monday—

Combination of Vegetables, Creole style.
Cabbage, Southern style.
Carrots with Drawn Butter and Parsley.
Sweet Potatoes, baked in waterless cooker.
Lecture: "Cooking Utensils and Health"

Tuesday—
Spanish Pot Roast with combination of Vegetables.
Baked Potatoes in waterless cooker.
Coffee.
Lecture: "Health and How to Eat to Live."

Wednesday—
India Creole Rice, Louisiana style.
Macaroni Au Gratin, Parisian style.
Coffee.
Lecture: "The Use of Cast Aluminum, Its Treatment and Care. Other Utensils."

Thursday—
Omelets, Spanish style.
Cake and Coffee.
Lecture: "Health and Utensils."

Friday—
Chicken Halibut baked with Parisian Tartar Sauce.
Coffee.
Lecture: "Cooking Utensils and How Proper Heat is Necessary for Successful Cooking."

Saturday—
A full line of Different Vegetables.
Closing Lecture: "Health and Cooking Utensils." A complete talk on Color Schemes, Banquets and Luncheons, and Garnishing of various kinds of Dishes.

Wagner Cast Aluminum Utensils and White Star Ranges will be used in the demonstration

THE SUN TELEGRAPH MELODY WAY CLUB

THIRD LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

I hope that you enjoyed the first two Melody Way lessons and that you now can play the melodies "Magic Music" and "To a River" with the Right Hand and also with the Left Hand. You must practice doing this smoothly and softly until you can play each phrase through without a break and in perfect time.

In fact, you should be able to play these melodies with either hand through from beginning to end in such perfect time that anyone could march and keep step to your playing.

If you have learned to do this perfectly, you can now begin to learn the chords that accompany the melodies. Perhaps you took the hint I gave you near the close of the second lesson and have already learned to play them!

However, I must suppose that you need help in learning to play the chords and this is my aim in writing your third lesson. Also, you were promised a new piece, "Little Wooden Shoes." Well, here it is, printed on this page and you are sure to love it as millions of French girls and boys have loved it for many, many years. Like "To a River," this piece, "Little Wooden Shoes" is called a "Folk Song."

Review

Before you attempt the new piece, let us review the melody of "Magic Music," playing it first with the Right Hand, then with the Left Hand. Hereafter, to save space, we shall abbreviate these words, like this:

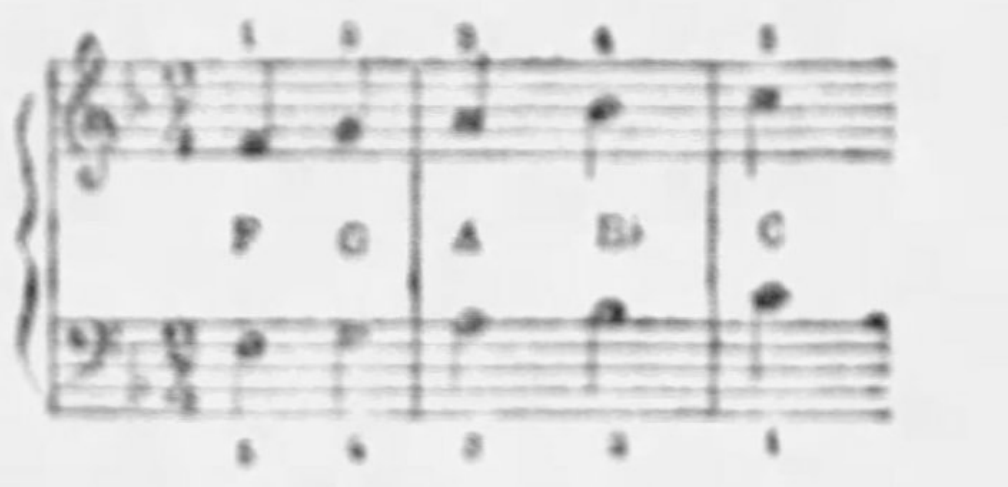
Right Hand—R. H.
Left Hand—L. H.

Please go through Lesson One and Lesson Two, taking each step carefully so that I may be sure you can do everything that I have asked you to do. Continue right on with the piece, "To a River."

Be sure to use the Melody Way Key Finder, both at the Key Board and at the Piano. It will prevent your striking any wrong keys.

Notes

Repeat the letter-names of all the melody notes in both pieces. There are only five notes to remember for the Treble Clef and five notes for the Bass Clef. First, study this:



Study Your Key Board

You can find the name of any key, white or black, on your paper Key Board. The letter name of each key is printed directly above it.

Learn the Notes

Above the Key Board and running along its entire length, is the Great Staff, which contains the Treble Staff and the Bass Staff, each with five lines. A brace joins the two staves at the extreme left end.

On the staff, directly over its key, is the note which stands for it. Notice that the note has the same letter name as its key on the piano. Observe also that several notes on either side of Middle C are found both on the bass staff and on the treble staff. You will need to know the notes on the small leger lines above the bass staff in learning to play the L. H. chords. This is my reason for asking you to learn these notes at this time.

Seventh Step

Play Left Hand Chords

Turn to Lesson One. At the very bottom of the page of the music to "Magic Music," you will see that it says "Chords in the Left Hand." Trace each note along the dotted line to its proper key. Memorize the tone-name of each note as well as its letter name, which is also the name of the piano key.

Now you will see that there are but two chords used in "Magic Music" which are:

Left Hand Chords

	I or Tonic Chord			V or Dominant Chord
Fingers—	5	3	1	5	2	1
Tones—	Do	Mi	So	Ti	Fa	So
Keys—	F	A	C	E	B♭	C

Notice that the fifth finger plays Do in the I Chord and Ti in the V Chord. Play each chord four times on the table while you repeat the tone names belonging to it.

Use the Melody Chord Finder

Now take your Melody Chord Finder and lay it across the black keys of your paper Key Board just as you used the Key Finder. Use the side marked No. 1 A, which gives the chords in the Major Scale. As before, place the Middle Do exactly over and even with the Key F to the right of Middle C. Now the Do farthest to the left on the Chord Finder will be over the first key you must play in the I Chord.

The Keys of the I Chord

The dark squares in the middle row of the Chord Finder show you the keys to play for the I chord. The keys are F, A, C. Practice this four times, playing first on the Key Board, then at the piano.

The Keys of the V Chord

The dark squares in the top row of the Chord Finder show you the keys to play for the V Chord. The keys are E, B-flat, C. (Notice that Re is omitted.) Practice this four times.

Playing Two-Count Chords

You are almost ready to play the Chords, in time, as they appear in "Magic Music." Since the three tones of each chord are struck at the same time because all these notes appear upon one half note stem, you must get the feeling of holding each chord for two counts. You can get this feeling by marching Left, Right, and clapping the Left Hand upon the Right Hand, once with each left step, like this:

Count—	1	2	1	2
Clap	1		1

Name the Chords

Now name all Chords in the first two lines. The first two phrases are:

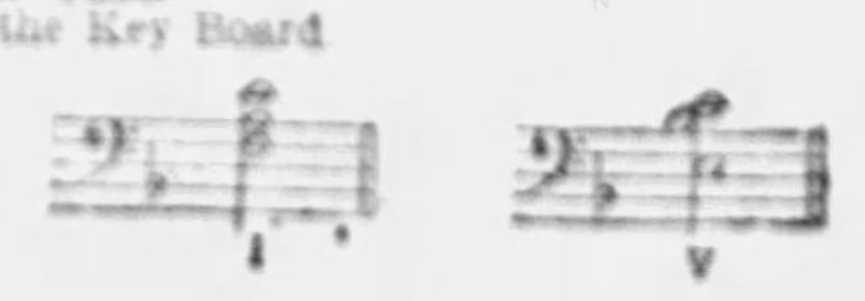
Count—		1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Words—	(1)	Mu	sic	is	for	girls	and	boys	—
Chords—		I		I		I		I
Words—	(2)	Just	like	you	—	just	like	me	—
Chords—		V		V		I		I

Recite the words of the first four phrases and let your left hand form the chord and drop to the Key Board, on the right keys, at the right time. Now play the L. H. chords at the piano, while you speak the words. Let the weight of the arm go to the fingers.

The next step is a little harder because you must do two things at once. If you can master this, you will soon be able to play both hands, one playing the chords, the other, the melody. Then your piece will sound finished. You will surely be delighted with the harmony!

Drum the rhythm of the words, or melody, with your R. H. while the L. H. drums the two count, half-note chord rhythm. Follow the notes of the music as you play the two rhythms together:

First—On the Table.
Second—On the Key Board.



Eighth Step

Two Hands Together

Right Hand Melody — Left Hand Chords

At last you are ready to go to the piano and play both hands together. It is very important to Play One Phrase at a Time

Practice the first phrase only, until you have mastered it! This will be fairly easy because you have only to play the I Chord.

Now practice the second phrase, first the R. H. Melody, then the L. H. Chords, then both hands together. If you find it hard to change instantly from the V Chord to the I Chord, you should practice playing this four times:

Counts—	1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Chords—	I	—	V	—	I	—	V	—

Then try both hands together again.

Ninth Step

Right Hand Chords

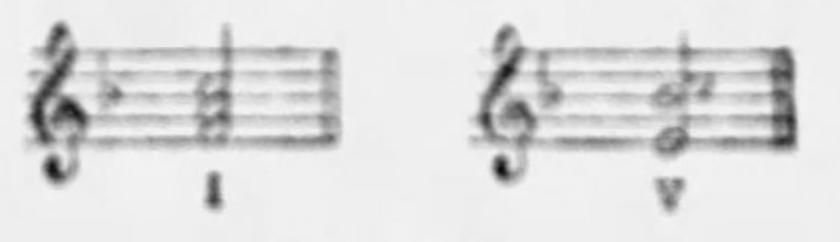
This step will be easy because the Chords are the same I and V Chords that you have just played with the L. H. You will find these chords above the small Key Board, just below the piece, "Magic Music."

Right Hand Chords

	I Chord			V Chord
Fingers	1	3	5	1	4	5
Tones—	Do	Mi	So	Ti	Fa	So
Keys—	F	A	C	E	B♭	C

Use your Chord Finder, as before, with Do placed on F. The R. H. Chords are located on the same keys as the L. H. Chords except that they are played one octave, or eight tones, higher.

Repeat, if necessary, all the steps you used before, to train your Right Hand to play the Chords quickly and correctly.



Tenth Step

Two Hands Together

Right Hand Chords—Left Hand Melody

Study the music of the third and fourth braces. We will illustrate with just one phrase.

Chords—		I	—	I	—	I	—	I	—
Counts—		1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Words—	(5)	Mu	sic	is	a	mag	ic	art	—

Drum each phrase on the table.
Play each phrase on the Key Board.
Play each phrase at the piano.
Practice each phrase separately:

First—The Right Hand Chords.
Second—The Left Hand Melody.
Third—Both hands together.

Now play "Magic Music" through with both hands playing together. You will be proud when you can play your first piece without a single break or mistake. It will please your friends, too!

To a River

Now a glance at the chords of "To a River" (printed in the second lesson.) You will see that the chords are the same, in both hands, as those in "Magic Music." However, in the first measure, you must learn to hold the L. H. Chord for two counts, while the R. H. plays four tones, Do, Re, Mi, Fa, which are eighth notes, like this:

Counts—	1	2	1	2
Words—	River	little	riv	er
Tones—	Do Re	Mi Fa	So	Mi
Chords—	I	—	I	—

Drum these two rhythms, as before. Then play on the Key Board and at the Piano. Once you have mastered your two hands, so that they will work together, each playing its own part, you will find it much easier to learn the charming pieces which are to follow.

Shift the Key Finder

In "Little Wooden Shoes," Do will be on G. Therefore, you must place the Key Finder in this new position. Study the charts at the bottom of the music page and trace each scale tone to its key.

Tones—	Do	Re	Mi	Fa	So
Fingers—	1	2	3	4	5
Keys—	G	A	B	C	D

Notice that all the Melody Keys are white.

Transposition

With your Key Finder in this new position, play the melodies "Magic Music" and "To a River" in the key of G, that is, with Do on G.

Next, practice the I and V chords in the key of G. Observe that Ti in the V Chord is now on the black key, F sharp. Now try to play both hands together. Knowing the tones and chords in the new key, you will find it very much easier to learn the new piece in the new key.

Little Wooden Shoes

First Step—Recite the Words, in time.
Second Step—Speak the Tone words, in time.
Third Step—Play the Tones, on the Table.
First practice the R. H. Melody, each phrase separately.

FIRST PHRASE

Count One, Two, to each measure.

Count—	1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Words—	Little	wooden	shoes	going	hop	hop	hop	—
Tones—	Do Re	Mi Do	Re	Re Mi	Fa	Fa	Mi	—
Fingers	1 2	3 1	2	2 3	4	4	3	—
Chords—	I	—	IV	—	V	—	I	—

SECOND PHRASE

The rhythm and the chords are like that of the first phrase. Notice the slight change in the melody (last three notes).

THIRD PHRASE

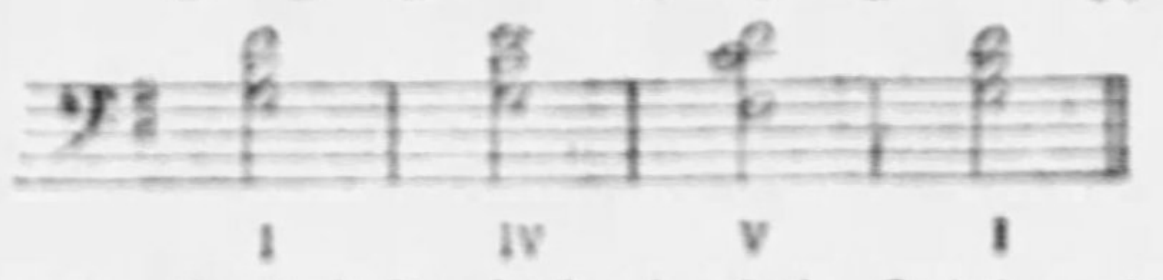
Count—	1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Words—	Come	come a	long	with	your	wel	come	song
Tones—	So	So Fa	Mi	Re Mi	Fa	So	Re	—
Fingers—	5	5 4	3	2 3	4	5	2	—
Chords—	I	—	I	—	V	—	V	—

FOURTH PHRASE

Rhythm, Melody and Chords are exactly like the third phrase.

Chord Practice

	I Chord			IV Chord			V Chord
Tones—	Do	Mi	So	Do	Fa	La	Ti	Fa	So
Left Hand—	5	3	1	5	2	1	5	2	1
Keys—	G	B	D	G	C	E	F♯	C	D



Now practice the Left Hand Chords of the first two phrases separately.

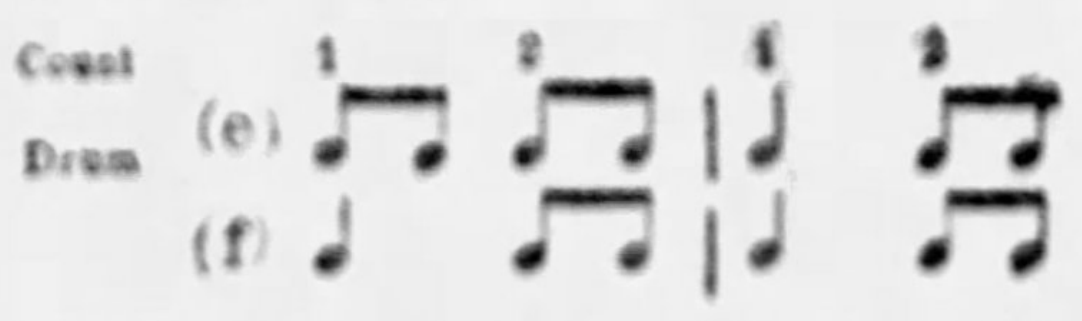
Counts—	1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Chords (1)—	I	—	IV	—	V	—	I	—
Chords (2)—	I	—	IV	—	V	—	I	—

The chords of the second phrase are the same as those in the first phrase. Practice the IV chord separately.

Practice the L. H. Chords of the third and fourth phrases.

Counts—	1	2	1	2	1	2	1	2
Chords (3)—	I	—	I	—	V	—	V	—
Chords (4)—	I	—	I	—	V	—	V	—

Practice these two new Rhythms.



Now try to play both hands together. If this seems difficult then you must practice each hand separately.

Notice that D. C. (Da Capo) means to return to the beginning and close at Fine (pronounced fee-nay) which means "finish."

And so you will finish the third lesson. I hope that you can play all three pieces with both hands! If you can, you will be well started on "The Melody Way!" Indeed, this marks a milestone on the musical journey of The Melody Way Club.

The Most Brilliant Social Asset Is the Ability to Play the Piano

Acquire the ability to play the piano and you will never lack friends. For the greatest of all gifts will be yours—the ability to entertain, to bring pleasure, to comfort, and to inspire with music. Such a man or woman is always popular, always sought after, whether his music be that of the great classics or the foot-itching rhythm of today's jazz.

Every child deserves the privilege of a piano education. When you give this knowledge to your children, you provide them with a permanent source of attraction and lay the foundation of undying happiness.

Today's pianos are made to fit every type of room and every size of purse—grand pianos, baby grands, uprights, and player pianos with their repertoire of the world's greatest music.

Stop in at the show rooms of these piano merchants, and learn how easy and inexpensive it is to give your family this wealth of happiness and culture—a piano.

PGH. WOMAN SHOT TO DEATH

STENOGRAPHER BELIEVED SUICIDE

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 24—(Special.)—The body of Mrs. Anna P. Squillace, 33, a widow, was found in her bed Friday afternoon in a rooming house at 152 Knapp street, with a bullet wound over her heart and a small nickel-plated revolver nearby. Mrs. Squillace had been dead for about three days, the coroner believes. She came to Milwaukee from Pittsburgh, Pa., and had been employed here as a stenographer.

Mrs. Anna Helen Papp Squillace was a daughter of Mrs. Rose Papp, who conducts a confectionery store at 1614 Fulton street, North Side. The mother did not know of her daughter's death in Wisconsin until notified by The Sun-Telegraph.

SUFFERED BREAKDOWN

Another daughter, Mrs. Joseph Maklary, lives at 325 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, but she evidently had not known of the tragedy, Mrs. Papp said. Mrs. Squillace left Pittsburgh last October, going to Wheeling, then to Columbus, O., and later to Detroit, Mich. She always was dissatisfied, the mother said, having suffered a nervous breakdown following her husband's death several years ago.

"Helen was a good stenographer and a hard-working girl, but she couldn't stand being in one place too long," Mrs. Papp explained.

Mrs. Squillace had no children. She was pretty, her mother said, but had no particular admirers as far as the mother knew. Mrs. Papp thinks it likely she shot herself.

GIRLS' SCREAMS ROUT PROWLER

JOSEPHINE PETOCKO RUTH CLARK NELLIE PETOCKO

Josephine Petocko, 14, awakened early Wednesday morning to find an intruder bending over her bed, in her home, 220 Manor street. She and her sister, Nellie, 15, sleeping with her, screamed and the man fled. Miss Clark, 21, 218 Manor street, saw the man run from the house and was a witness against a suspect whom the girls failed to identify in Morals Court.

SIZE OF TAX CUT UNDECIDED BY COOLIDGE

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—President Coolidge is undetermined as yet just how much of a tax slash he will be able to recommend to the next Congress, it was announced at the White House.

On behalf of the President it was explained that no adequate estimate can be made until the Treasury and budget bureau submit estimates on the anticipated revenues and expenses of the government for the next fiscal year.

While a huge Treasury surplus is anticipated, it was pointed out that many of the items helping swell the revenues this year were of a non-recurrent nature—that is they can't be collected again. Also payments from several sources were received by the Treasury this year which in the ordinary course would not be paid until next year. This helped boost the receipts this year but will result in an equal slump next year.

In general, however, the President feels that the amount of revenue derived from income taxes, which is the chief source, will be about the same as last year. While payments by individuals may vary, the President believes that these fluctuations will be absorbed by the returns from corporations.

OFFICER KILLS RAIL OFFICIAL

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—George H. Kummer, 60, traffic manager of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad, was shot and killed last night by Police Officer Myles Brabazon, who had attempted to arrest Kummer on complaint of his wife.

The officer was summoned by Mrs. Kummer, who stated her husband had gone temporarily insane and was trying to kill her. Brabazon said he was trying to persuade Kummer to go peacefully with him to a hospital for treatment when the latter turned on him with a knife. Brabazon said he then fired in self defense.

DAYLIGHT TIME IN COUNTY COURTS ENDS

Daylight saving time officially ends in the Allegheny county courts today. An order handed down by Judge James R. Macfarlane fixed 9:30 a. m., Eastern Standard time, as the hour at which Criminal Court will open Monday, since the hands of the clocks will be moved back one hour Sunday morning. The clocks in the various courts were not changed.

SERUM RUSHED IN PLANE TO PARALYSIS VICTIM

ACCOUNTANTS TO GRADUATE

Alexander Dunbar, vice president and cashier of the Bank of Pittsburgh, will deliver the principal address to the graduating class of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy in the Blue room of the William Penn Hotel next Saturday evening. Ernest Crowther, recently appointed dean, will preside and Andrew H. Blass, managing director of the school, will present the diplomas.

Included in the class of 29 is one young woman, Miss Margaret Pellegrini. Other members are: Dallas Holmes, Truman E. Clark, James B. Laughart, R. E. Leonard, J. Reed Miller, A. H. Morse, Herbert J. Sherman, George T. Spettigue, Jr., J. M. Todd, A. W. Dively, Albert H. Hold, William C. Kyle, P. A. Love, C. N. Marlen, Jr., F. M. Wentz, Lewis A. Scull, A. S. Williams, R. D. Sherick, E. E. Yost.

LEMONS REACH PEAK PRICE

Despite the absence this year of a demand for lemonade as a heat wave relief measure, the price of lemons has soared to from 75 to 90 cents a dozen.

One theory as to the cause of the high price was that a great demand for lemon juice to disguise the [illegible] in rank varieties of bootleg liquor has created a shortage.

Most of the Pittsburgh supply comes from Italy and California, and yesterday the price quoted at the produce yards was $12 for boxes containing 200 large or 360 small lemons.

B. & O. Road Centenary Pageant Opens

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—One hundred years of railroading are being celebrated today with the opening of the "Fair of the Iron Horse," the Baltimore and Ohio railorad's centenary pageant of transportation,

Within the spacious Hale Thorpe oval, seven miles from here, the history of man's efforts to conquer space are vividly portrayed by exhibits which outline the history of America,

From the primitive Indian "travois" to the modern giants of the rails, each important development has a place. In the great Hall of Transportation at the center of the oval, subsidiary developments, such as the air brake, and railway bridge construction are shown either by specimens, or in some cases by models.

The exhibition includes as an outstanding feature a pageant, tracing transportation from its beginning to the present. In sharp contrast, huge locomotives, some of them pulling trains of luxurious Pullman coaches, follow the Conestoga wagon, prairie schooner, and representations of canal boats of pre-Civil War days in a five-mile long parade.

"Quaint wood burning engines, with balloon smokestacks, puffing along under their own steam, draw gayly painted coaches in which the "great-grandparents" of present-day America sit.

King George V, an English locomotive resplendent in dark green paint and shining brass, has its place in line with the 95-year-old Atlantic and a replica of famous "Tom Thumb."

Engine No. 6100, of the Canadian National Railway, the largest in the British empire, is in striking contrast with the upright boilers and scalloped smokestacks of ancient relics of railroading.

Hughes Can Run; Menacing Auto Is the Proof

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Some question of whether Charles E. Hughes, former secretary of state and Supreme Court justice as well as former presidential candidate, is able to run again has been removed.

He made a good run to avoid being run down by an automobile. He was stepping across a street when a traffic officer turned the tide of automobiles his way.

He put his cane under his arm and made the few yards ahead of all other crossing sprinters.

And remarked, "I can still run."

TECH IS GIVEN FLORA EXHIBIT

The botanical collection of the late Judge John D. Shafer has been presented to Carnegie Museum by Mrs. Shafer, it was announced yesterday.

Judge Shafer was founder of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania and his private collection consists of about 1,500 specimens of ferns, flowering plants and mosses, some of which were collected as far back as 1876.

RAIL LINK PLEA BEFORE I. C. C. MONDAY

The proposed new trunk-line railroad from the Great Lakes to tidewater, with Pittsburgh as its pivotal point, will come before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington for hearing Monday.

Specifically, the commission will hear the application of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad for permission to construct about 38 miles of new track between a point on the West Side Belt Railroad, near Cochrans Mills, Allegheny county, and Connellsville, where it would connect with the tracks of the Western Maryland Railroad.

With this link completed the Northwest will be brought between three and four days nearer tidewater, it is estimated, by linking up the Western Maryland and the Wheeling & Lake Erie system with its Eastern outlet at Baltimore.

The application is signed by F. E. Taplin, president of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad.

$100,000 in Gems Lost In Taxicab

(International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. — Secrecy which surrounded the six-day search for $100,000 in gems stolen from Mrs. Frank G. Allen, wife of a Western millionaire banker, was dropped today as scores of police and private detectives toured the pawnshops and known "fences" of the metropolitan area.

Mrs. Allen missed her jewels after a taxicab trip with her husband and their 12-year-old granddaughter from a Cunard line pier to a local hotel. The Allens had just returned from abroad.

The gems were carried in a leather case, the police learned, which Allen gave to the driver with an admonition to "keep an eye on it." A servant followed in another cab with luggage.

The Allens identified the picture of a taxicab driver at police headquarters as the man they think drove them to the hotel. The driver has not been arrested, but it was learned that the police have him under surveillance.

Before leaving New York, it is understood, Allen offered a substantial reward for recovery of the gems and "no questions asked." The Allens live in Moline, Ill., and Pasadena, Cal.

The missing jewels include a brooch of pearls and diamonds, diamonds marquis and dinner rings, sets of diamond and aquamarine earrings, a sapphire and diamond ring, an aquamarine necklace, a gold mesh bag, a silver powder bag, a silver powder box, gold mounted book, jade boxes and numerous novelties set with precious stones.

Forbes

Morgan Not Mexican Bond-Banker; Morrow Close-Up.

By B. C. FORBES

DON'T imagine for a moment that Dwight W. Morrow is going down to Mexico to stir up war. He isn't that kind of a fellow. He's as peace-loving as President Coolidge.

I happen to have been one of his neighbors for more than a decade and there is no better-liked citizen in his suburban community. Not only is he democratic through and through, but he has always willingly undertaken more than his share of [illegible] duties. Also, he has done much work for his state, New Jersey, under Gov. Woodrow Wilson and since.

Mr. Morrow cannot quite understand why astonishment should be expressed that he is giving up a partnership in J. P. Morgan & Company to become ambassador to Mexico at relatively a trifling salary ($17,500). Incidentally, Mr. Morrow has paid as much as $1000 a day in income tax, the public records show.

MR. MORROW'S attitude is that any thinking citizen would comply with a request from the President to undertake an important position, particularly one entailing difficult and to say disagreeable duties, if able to do so financially. Mr. Morrow's motto always has been:

"Every responsible citizen should be prepared to carry his share of the load."

Incidentally, years ago I made a canvass of New York's financial world to find out the man regarded as the best-hearted, most unselfish of them all. Most voted for Dwight Morrow than for anyone else.

That Morrow's appointment is part of a plot to bludgeon Mexico into making good her debts to enrich Morgan & Company—or fight—is utterly ridiculous. If Coolidge had any such thought in mind, surely the selection of a Morgan partner as ambassador would be "spreading the net in sight of the bird." As a matter of fact, Mexico's principal bond issues were not floated by Morgan & Company, but by other New York international bankers and by British and French bankers.

When things went wrong, Morgan & Company were called in by the banking heads of each of these nations to endeavor to straighten things out and their co-operation was welcomed rather than resented by Mexico—just as the bankers of different nations asked the Morgan house to head the Chinese consortium and, more recently, to handle the bonds issued in connection with the Dawes plan, although Morgan & Company had not floated a single loan.

Mr. Morrow understands Latin-Americans. He has rendered services to Chile and to Cuba, always acceptably. Indeed, when President Machado recently visited New York, he stayed with Mr. Morrow.

He has none of the haughty dignity the public—often mistakenly—associate with powerful Wall Street bankers. He is little more than five feet, has a modest personality, and is [illegible] indifferent to dressing. His eldest daughter—his only child out of school—he has three daughters and one son—is not going to give up her position as a teacher when the ambassador-elect leaves for Mexico, probably before the middle of October.

"All work is interesting; the more difficult it is the more interesting it is," I have heard Mr. Morrow remark. That is why he regards his new job as a challenge to the best that is in him.

THE stock market acts as if it is tired after its long strenuous climb.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE reveals his political astuteness by selecting Roy A. Young, of Minneapolis, for governor of the Federal Reserve Board. The agricultural world, notably the Northwest, needs to be placated. From all accounts, Mr. Young, who is only 45, has earned an enviable reputation and should make a successful head of the reserve board. Nobody wants to see it dominated by Wall Street or the east.

MY guess is that James A. Farrell will be named to preside over the U. S. Steel Corporation. He has been its exceptionally capable operating head for over sixteen years. A prominent lawyer-banker may possibly be made chairman of the finance committee, but not ranking executive.

Local Market Quiet, Prices Steady

Prices were steady to firm on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short session today, but there was no noticeable change in the general character of the trading. Early quotations were about par with those prevailing on the close last night, while the volume of business was moderate and there was indication that buyers were disposed to lift bids beyond small fractions.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend on National Fireproofing preferred had no influence on that issue which sold again at 24, unchanged from Friday's price.

Standard Sanitary was firm at 34½ with a few small lots changing hands at that figure. Fuels were rather dull, but bids and offers were about the same as Friday's late quotations. Shaw Knox Steel common held steady around 95, the figure at which several lots of the stock sold during the previous session.

Indiscriminate Buying.

Moody's weekly review of financial conditions says in part: "There are many signs suggesting the possibility of an [illegible] wave of indiscriminate public buying. Among the evidences of public enthusiasm are the universal circulation of tips, the multiplication of investment trusts, the great volume of financial advertising, the large number of stocks traded in each day and the large volume of the correspondence of financial houses with persons inquiring about purchases. Investment capital remains as plentiful and the rates for commercial paper and acceptances are so far below the yields of high-grade bonds as to foreshadow a further upward movement of bond prices. STOCK MARKET PRICES SHOW FIRM TONE

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Prices displayed a firm tone at the opening of today's market. Initial gains, as a rule, were small, but they were well distributed over a broad list of copper, motor, oil, food and public utility shares. General Motors (old) advanced 1⅝ points and Mack Trucks 1.

With the technical position of the market obviously improved by the reaction early in the week, operators for the rise resumed their activities with confidence, being aided by further short covering on the part of timid "bear" traders. General Motors (old) was the early feature, soaring more than 3 points to 278 before the end of the first half hour. The new stock crossed 135 for a gain of 2½ points. Mack Trucks extended its gain to nearly 3 points, but the other motors were sluggish. Special buying again took place in Houston Oil. Revival of activity and strength in the Public Utilities was stimulated by merger reports involving some of the large eastern companies. High-priced industrial specialties such as Dupont and International Silver, also received good support. Foreign exchanges opened firm, with demand sterling around $4.86¼.

JURY ATTENDS COW MILKING

CHILLICOTHE, O., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—A Chillicothe cow is particular as to who milks her and, as a result, she is being milked twice daily in the presence of a court jury here.

When Judge W. H. Utz, of St. Joseph, came here to sit in a bank failure case, he found one venireman who wanted to be released because his cow would permit no one else to milk her.

Judge Utz, wanting to keep the jury intact, arose to the occasion. Every morning and evening the jurors, in charge of the sheriff, march to the one juror's home, five blocks from the courthouse and stand by while the cow is milked.

MOVIE ACTRESS SEEKS DIVORCE

By Universal Service.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The truth is in the Scotch.

Capt. Alastair MacIntosh, retiring husband of Constance Talmadge, moving picture star, admitted as much when confronted with the report from Edinburgh that his wife had filed there a suit for divorce.

"Almost every city in the world has falsely reported our divorce, but this time the report is a correct one," the captain said.

"There are two suits, one by each of us. We are different in temperament, and this seems to be the best solution."

Miss Talmadge, also in Paris, is in bed with a severe cold, and inaccessible. Capt. MacIntosh explained that the suits should encounter no obstacles under Scotch law.

WIFE OF ROOSEVELT'S NAVY HEAD DIVORCED

PARIS, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. Alis Meyer Rodgers, daughter of George Von L. Meyer, secretary of the navy under President Roosevelt, has been granted a divorce on grounds of abandonment by the Seine Tribunal, it was learned today, from Commander Christopher Raymond Perry Rodgers of the United States Navy. They were married in Washington on April 26, 1913. The children were divided between them.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Firm prices continued to rule the bond market today, although business was again of a limited and desultory character. Mortgages of the higher grades were quickly absorbed when offered, still within small fractions of their top prices.

Small gains were recorded by a number of miscellaneous liens, including Denver and Rio Grande 4s, Missouri Pacific 4s, Great Northern 4½s and a few of the public utility issues. There was some revival of interest in industrial securities after a brief period of selling. Skelly Oil 5s reflected the general improvement of the petroleum industry and Bethlehem Steel 6s and Pressed Steel Car 5s moved up fractionally.

Declines were neither numerous nor large. Burlington 4½s and Great Northern 7s were off slightly.

Little attention was paid to the foreign group and Federal Government obligations were inactive.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars).

2 IN ACCIDENTS DIE OF HURTS

Two men, injured in industrial accidents Thursday, died in Pittsburgh Hospital today.

Harry A. Dinner, 65, 1018 Jenny Lind street, McKeesport, died from a fractured skull suffered when he fell 12 feet while at work in the plant of the National Tube Company.

Louis Spence, 23, 1554 Meldron avenue, Donora, died from burns suffered in an explosion of hot metal at the Donora zinc works.

COL. LENONE, OLDEST ELK, 95, DIES IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—Funeral services for Col. Charles F. Lenone, 95, believed to have been the oldest Elk in the United States, were conducted at Glendale today. Col. Lenone was a commander of Indian scouts and a wagon train leader in pioneer days. He was a friend of "Buffalo Bill." He was formerly exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge of Paterson, N. J., and held a seat on the New York Cotton Exchange. He died while visiting a son, Lewis P. Lenone, at San Diego.

HOOVER PLANS SURVEYS OF DISTRIBUTION

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—An exhaustive investigation of the commercial channels through which the thousands of commodities in general use in the United States reach the market is planned by Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

The Commerce Department contemplates a "distribution survey" of the entire country in connection with the 1930 census or shortly thereafter, Hoover announced.

Sectional surveys of similar character have been taken in New York, Colorado and other states and have proven of wide and important use to commerce and industry, according to Hoover.

"It is believed that a national distribution census, taken periodically, possibly every two or four years, would prove of immense value," Hoover said.

A committee of experts from the Commerce Department and the Census Bureau will consider the project prior to the next session of Congress and may recommend legislation for appropriations. Hoover believes that the census would cost about $1,000,000.

Greater efficiency of the distribution system is highly desirable, in the opinion of officials, who pointed out that one of the chief factors in high living costs is that of distribution.

Marked changes in the country's competitive system have developed since the war. Experts pointed out that a wide range of virtually unrelated commodities are sold in a varied class of retail establishments. Competitions in articles generally sold today in drug, hardware, department and grocery stores, confectionary establishments and electric shops has become intense.

BOND EXCHANGE LIMIT OCT. 1

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Thousands of Second Liberty loan bond holders were warned by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that they will be unable to exchange their bonds for other Government securities after October 1.

Announcing that exchanges for 3½ per cent Treasury notes would be permitted up to that time, Mellon said the Treasury had "definitely decided that with the closing of the subscription books on October 1 no further exchange privilege will be offered."

The Second Liberties will cease to bear interest November 15, having been called for redemption.

Exchanges to date have met expectations, Mellon said. About $1,200,000,000 of the bonds were outstanding when the present final exchange offer was announced.

Pointing out that bondholders may make the exchange and at the same time be paid six months' interest on their bonds to November 15, Mellon said:

"The banks of the country can perform a real public service in endeavoring to inform their customers of the exchange offering and remind them that Second Liberty loan bonds have been called for redemption November 15."

Heavy melting steel scrap has dropped 25 cents a ton in the Pittsburgh district. Sales have been made at $15 a ton. Quotations range from $15 to $15.50.

Canadian Stock Purchases.

Toronto dispatches to Wall street quote Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., who is on his way to Japan, as saying he considers the purchase of Canadian bank stocks by interests in the United States merely indicates they are first-class securities offering a better return.

N. Y., O. & W. Surplus Lower.

August surplus of the New York, Ontario and Western declined to $368,912 after charges, from $572,045 in August last year, and for the first eight months of 1927 to $70,160 from $838,784 in the same period of 1926.

U. S. Leads Tobacco Trade.

Producing one-third of the world's total output of tobacco and exporting about 45 per cent of the world's exports, the United States is the principal influence in the tobacco industry, says the New York Trust Company. The annual tobacco crop of this country, the bank states, is greater than the exports from all the countries of the world.

Standard Telephone and Cables, Ltd., a British subsidiary of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, recently installed 700 lines of the first public automatic exchange in the Irish Free State at Dublin. Ultimate capacity will be 4,000 lines and another exchange soon will be opened with 4,500 lines, the entire contract having been given to Standard Telephone and Cables.

Drunken Crows in Dizzy Air Stunts But Fool Police

By Universal Service.

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Sept. 24. — Townsmen were startled when 100 black crows, drunk after guzzling too much corn mash, performed queer antics here.

They flew upside down, dropped into tail-spins, fell flutteringly to the ground, or else were "just plain foolish," the odor of mash being plainly noticeable as they were picked up and placed upright until they could recover.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Harley McNabb and Police Chief John Adams tried to find out where the crows got their "likker." But the crows weren't so foolish, and failed to return to the source of supplies for a second helping.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT CALVARY

A special musical program, featured by Von Weber's "Jubilee Cantata," will be offered Sunday night in Calvary Episcopal Church, Shady avenue, by a choir of 50 voices under the direction of Harvey B. Gaul. Mrs. Rebecca Hepner will be the soprano and Mrs. Madeline Lewis will be the contralto. Ralph Lewando, violinist, will play a number of selections.

At the morning service the Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Van Etten will preach a Harvest Home sermon.

W. VA. CONVICT FOUND MURDERED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Sam Valcati, believed to have served a term in the Charles, W. Va., jail, was found slain here. He was evidently beaten over the head with an ax after being shot. Authorities think he was the victim of a bootleggers' feud. Clippings from a Charleston newspaper indicated his jail sentence there. A letter from that town and a pawn ticket for his watch were also in his pockets.

FILMS OF FIGHT SEIZED IN AIRPLANE

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Henry Sonenshine, head of the Goodart Film Company holding sole rights to the Tunney-Dempsey fight picture, was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal John Oros.

Sonenshine was taken into custody while loading five sets of films and one set of negatives into an airplane.

He said the films were to go to Canada for exhibition. The arrest warrant states that they were to be carried into Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

His attorneys promptly set up the claim that he was not violating the Federal law, as he did not plan to carry the films from one state into another. They will seek an injunction to secure the release of the films for shipment into Canada and other foreign countries.

FINED, BUT SHOWS GO ON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Any attempt to show movies of the Tunney-Dempsey championship fight outside Illinois will be made at the risk of prosecution under the Federal law prohibiting interstate transportation of fight films, it was announced here.

The Department of Justice said no special instructions were being sent out, but district attorneys were relied upon to see that the law was enforced. Several convictions have been obtained in the last few weeks in connection with other fight pictures, it was stated, despite difficulties sometimes encountered in proving the charge of transportation.

Since the Dempsey-Sharkey fight, films were exhibited in some states. However, after fines for their transportation had been imposed, the fate of the new films appeared to turn largely on the attitude of individual prosecutors and judges.

The Federal law does not extend to a subsequent showing of the films. The New York district attorney's office announced that if the pictures are brought into that jurisdiction Tunney and Dempsey will be subpenaed, as well as the movie promoters.

LAY OHIO FIRE TO BLACKHAND

By Universal Service.

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Sept. 24—"Blackhanders" who invaded this peaceful country and introduced some of the big city ways to the townsmen, are being sought after setting fire to a garage and two cars.

A week ago Jesse Ream of Somerset, near here, received a "blackhand" letter threatening to burn down his garage unless he left $250 in a nearby pig pen. He treated the letter as a joke. Thursday night his family was aroused when the Ream garage burned. Two automobiles in it as well as the garage were destroyed, causing a loss of $2,000.

E. R. M'NULTY, VETERAN OF SPANISH WAR, SOUGHT

Where is E. R. McNulty, who enlisted in Company L, First United State Volunteer Infantry, in 1898 in Pittsburgh and served in the Philippines?

Dr. A. M. Guittard, Sr., of Loo-Ang, Samar, P. I., in a letter to the Missing Persons Bureau, states that it is important that he get in communication with McNulty. He states that the soldier reached the rank of sergeant major and served in the Army under the name of Edward Betts.

Lindbergh Flight Gets His Name In Directory

By Universal Service.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24.—In all the years that Charles "Slim" Lindbergh lived here, his name never appeared in the city directory.

But when he became Col. Lindbergh, the "Lone Eagle of the Air," there was an insertion in the next edition of the directory.

The Colonel is now listed as one of the residents.

St. Louis wants the world to know where her favorite son lives.

HAVEY BOYLE

TAKE your right fist and strike yourself just tolerably hard on the back of the neck, just above your collar. That region is the base of the brain. Tap yourself several times there. Then think of Gene Tunney who throughout his bout with Dempsey was subjected to the strong Dempsey hand striking the Tunney neck. That is known as the rabbit punch. It is barred, yet a referee who would stop a bout of the Tunney-Dempsey dimensions for violation of the rule, would cause a great panic, a riot, almost a scandal. Yet it is a punch that is cruel, almost barbarous. Dempsey continually punched Tunney in this fashion, was cautioned by the referee, yet Dempsey persisted. Jack was shrewd enough to know that the offense was not great enough to bring about disqualification, but realized its possible importance.

HAVEY BOYLE

BESIDES this gesture Dempsey also butted the champion with his strong head. That, too, is a very questionable tactic, yet one that never brings disqualification. Once in the bout the other night Tunney, after wisely waiting for a clinch, told the referee that one of Dempsey's blows was unnecessarily low. The low blow might have been altogether unintentional; it is difficult to believe the other offenses were not purposeful.

NOW all this may seem quite unworthy of Dempsey, yet it is possible that the man himself is not to blame. Forces which have combined to make him as he is, an instinctive fighting creature, extremely elemental, are the reason. Dempsey just cannot be otherwise. Outside the ring he has many genuine human traits, but once in the ring Dempsey is transformed into a fighting creature, intent on a kill, and the means are not studied with any bow to the conventions.

IN FACT, the conventions of the ring bother this dark-haired giant, showing plainly in the ring, a savage strain, enhanced by his black hair, heavy eyebrows, serious and meaningful frown. He is fettered by the rule that once you strike a foe down you must walk away. To the elemental Dempsey that is so incongruous that the interruption sort of throws him out of his stride. To Dempsey, possibly, the right and proper fighting convention would be that when you fell your man, you should jump on him and squeeze out with relentless grip anything suggesting remaining life. What nonsense, what injustice, probably thinks the primeval Dempsey, that a man, having scored a near-kill, must walk away from the fallen prey.

BY INSTINCT Dempsey is prompted to stay close to the agony he has brought, waiting to complete it, or at least to make it more intense. But instead of this he is waved away. It is just as if a lion had just struck down a hyena, and then just as he was settling down to enjoy the meal, some strange force of the forest forced the lion to walk away from the meal. How absurd.

DEMPSEY moved first to his corner, after the knockdown, and then, prompted by the referee, moved to a neutral corner still farther away from the sitting Tunney. At last Tunney got up and there followed in that seventh round a peculiar dance, a strange, weird dance, seemingly as part of a mysterious rite of a new religion. Tunney danced feverishly as if to very fast music. Backward and backward, around and around, faster, faster. He must keep away from the dark-skinned man who was prowling in measured tread, almost stealthily, and altogether relentless. A sidestep, quick, this way and that way, by Tunney, a dart one way, a dart the other, then back and back and back, and the tempo of the imaginary music was quickening. Tunney danced and Dempsey strode, majestically, following on and on, around and around.

WHY doesn't Dempsey leap instead of walk in that steady tread? He knows that's useless. Wildness, impetuousness prompt him to catch this retreating figure, but he has learned that rushing in wildly brings a volley of disconcerting blows. He wants to be careful, deliberate, for if he once catches Tunney with careful aim the title will wing from a prostrate soul into the eager form of Dempsey.

TUNNEY keeps on moving away, motivated by that instinct of the man who burned by the blaze sagaciously gives the advancing flame a wide berth. The important part now, Tunney's anxious eyes tell you, is to keep away from this serious-looking form which keeps on advancing. Fortunately, unlike a nightmare which makes a man seem immobile as a strange menace approaches, Tunney finds himself quick, agile, swiftly mobile. He can move, to his great delight, any old way. Now this way, now that. Those legs, what great friends!

THE Tunney instinct for self-preservation is made more acute than usual by that forward moving black-haired form which a few seconds ago rocked Tunney to the floor. Those Tunney legs, like gallant chargers, answer the slightest whim of the controlling force.

What splendid legs! Sideways, backward, sideways, backward, those legs shout up to Tunney: "We'll help. Whatever you say, we will do. You're imposing, it's true, with these quick movements, and we're pretty tired just now after that Dempsey sock. That sock kind of buckled us, but we're ready now. This way? Sure thing. That way. O. K. Anything you say. Here comes Dempsey, quick, back now, quick again, to the side. My but fiddler Dempsey is playing a fast tune now, but we'll stay on. Pretty soon now that bell will ring."

As the beard turns gray, gentlemen, and the voice assumes a cackle tell the grandchildren about the strange, weird dance of fistic death in the seventh round of the second Tunney-Dempsey bout.

Invaders Put Out of Play

By Universal Service.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 24.—The East and the West, according to Mr. Kipling, do not meet, but they collaborated at Garden City yesterday to put down that foreign invasion which was threatening the women's golf title.

Miss Maureen Orcutt, youthful Metropolitan champion, and representing the eastern golfing section, defeated Miss Ada MacKenzie, the Canadian champion, in one semi-final match of the women's national tournament in progress here. Miss Orcutt won, 2 and 1, on the seventeenth green.

Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn of Kansas City carried western colors successfully against Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Canada, three times American champion, winning, 1 up.

Miss Orcutt, one of the most brilliant of America's younger women players and whose ascendancy to championship ranks has long been prophesied will meet the veteran campaigner, Mrs. Horn, in the 36-hole final here today.

Miss Orcutt, whose game is more powerful than that of the little westerner, is a strong favorite for the title, although she is still in her teens.

Miss Orcutt, playing a strong steady game, was never threatened by the Canadian champion, Miss MacKenzie. At one time the Metropolitan champion was so far ahead of her Canadian rival that the gallery began straggling away. Although Miss MacKenzie rallied to take the twelfth and thirteenth, shooting par, while Maureen wasted a stroke at each, the youthful easterner refused to crack and calmly stroked herself to victory. She never at any time in the match trailed her rival.

Mrs. Horn's victory over the three-time champion, Mrs. Fraser, was a decided upset. Mrs. Fraser, whose strenuous matches with Glenna Collett and Mlle. La Chaume had claimed their toll of vitality, did not display her usual strong game.

SOCCER

by TOM BIRKS

TODAY'S GAMES

DISTRICT LEAGUE

Central A. C. at New Kensington (Lownie.)
Leechburg at Turtle Creek (Sherrard.)
Celtics at Pittsburgh Rovers (Brannigan.)
German Sport at U. S. & S. (Brown.)

SCOTTISH CLAN LEAGUE

Clan Cameron at Clan McPherson.
Clan Gordon at Clan Grant (Lumsden.)

Six more than interesting games will be staged today in the soccer code, four games being scheduled in the district league, and the other two finding favor with the followers of the Scottish Clan League. The two in the last-named are the opening games in this loop.

The big battle of the day should be staged at Lawrence Park when the Celtics and their rivals, the Rovers, come together for the first meeting of the season. Meetings between these soccer representatives from the Strip always produce plenty of interesting soccer for 90 minutes.

Then in the Clan loop Camerons and McPhersons meet on the North Side. Should the same rivalry exist that was manifest last season, then the fans attending the Salt Works Park should see one of the best battles of the day.

The Switch and Signal boys will meet the German aggregation and collect two points to its league standing. The experience of the Wakeman aggregation should be clever enough to extract these without much trouble.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ELEVEN IS WEAKENED

LOS ANGLES, Sept. 24.—Southern California's Thundering Herd stampeded to an early practice session on the first day of grid practice. Amid the aggregation that milled to and fro on Bovard Field there were only 11 lettermen. Troy's front wall defense of 1926 was missing, as was an all-American.

"A fine bunch of beef," said the stranger, as he paused to see what all the shooting was for. There was plenty of shooting as it was a red-letter day for the camera clickers and newsreel men.

By virtue of a wholesale graduation in June, Coach Jones lost hopes of winning many titles this fall. Statisticians have it doped to the man, and Troy is minus 11 lettermen.

WILKINSBURG AND AVALON ELEVENS BATTLE TODAY

Avalon High School is bent on breaking the jinx which Wilkinsburg hold over them on the football field and it will be given its opportunity today when it hooks up with the Holy City at Graham Field, Wilkinsburg.

For the past five years Wilkinsburg has opened its season with the Avalon crew and has yet to taste defeat. This may mean much in a psychological way for the Holy City eleven inasmuch as it is usually regarded as the favorite.

SCRIBE REVIEWS FIGHT FROM $5 SEAT

Editor's Note—For weeks the remoteness of the "rim-side seats" at Soldier Field gave newspaper paragraphers and cartoonists material for many humorous quips. Dale C. Harrison, an Associated Press staff writer, viewed the fight from this faraway $5 section. This is the story of his assignment.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(A. P.)—Let this be the Odyssey of the five dollar seats, of the Homo Sapiens who sat therein, and of the fight they saw—if any.

These five dollar seats—the cheapest and most remote in the crater that is Soldier Field—were really not as black as they were painted; they were blacker, said some of the spectators. The men who sat in them, and the women, behaved like martyrs during the first six round preliminary; began directing barbed remarks at the policemen and ushers during the second, became untractable after the third, and finally, like a flood, burst through the bluecoated levees and swirled down the aisles and over the planked seats into the $10, $20 and in a few cases, the ringside reservations.

DID NOT KNOW WINNER

Two-thirds of those who remained in these rim-side seats, three city blocks from the ring itself, actually did not learn who won the fight until sometime afterward. This was due partly to their great distance from the white-lighted ring, partly to the twisting thousands that screened their view, and partly to the confusion that seemed to exist in the ring itself.

The referee's count over Tunney in the seventh round seemed unconsciously long to the far-from-the-ringsiders, but as one of them explained, light only travels 186,000 miles a second.

Those who came late and had the temerity to seek their exact location in the $5 sections were greeted by guffaws from nearby fans and even from the police and the ushers themselves; for there had been much nudging forward, a row at a time, by those way back, so that the best of the cheap seats were occupied as soon as the first preliminary was on.

Nearly everyone, 75 per cent, at any rate, carried some kind of glasses—telescopes, field glasses or the little lenses that sold for a quarter.

To these $5 folk without optical aid, the ring was a dot of light on which marionettes moved, swung their arms or rushed at each other, for all the world like figures in a fantastic dream. The actors were such vague characters as one meets in that dusk between consciousness and unconsciousness—unreal, eerie—and somewhat absurd.

One advantage did these $5 sitters have: They were nearest the exits, and consequently able to get out first.

These cave dwellers of Soldier Field were "at" the fight anyway, whether they saw it or not. And some of them learned who won—and this is no exaggeration—when they bought papers downtown some time later.

MONDAY CHOSEN FOR POLO GAME

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(UP.)—Final play for the open polo championship of the United States will take place Monday at Meadowbrook Club, Long Island, the United States Polo Association announced today.

The British Army-in-India team has reached the final round and will meet the winner of today's match between the Sands Point, L. I., and the United States Army teams.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA HAS LARGE COACHING STAFF

LOS ANGLES, Sept. 24.—A complete coaching staff will tutor the University of Southern California football team with a man specializing almost every angle of the game. Howard Jones is head coach; Willis O. Hunter, works with the backfield; Cliff Herd, kickers; Leo Calland, line; Jeff Cravath, line; Gordon Campbell, backfield; Aubrey Devine, head freshman coach; Henry Le Febvre, assistant frosh coach, backfield; Kenneth Cox, assistant frosh coach, line.

TROJANS BOAST LARGEST BAND FOR GRID GAMES

LOS ANGLES, Sept. 24.—Southern California will have the largest drill band in its history this fall, according to Hal Roberts, Trojan band leader. He plans on having a 175 piece band to perform at football games in the Los Angles Coliseum and present plans are to send a large band to Chicago for the Southern California-Notre Dame football tilt.

LIKELY TO TWIRL SERIES OPENER

RAY KREMER

Here's a close-up view of Kremer's "fighting face." In the event that the Pirates get into the World's Series, Ray is almost a "sure bet" to pitch the opening game against the Yanks.

IN ACTION

The pitching movements of Kremer are so graceful that they are almost "poetic." The Buc slab ace has turned in 17 victories this season and at present owns a string of six successive wins. He has pitched three shutout triumphs within the last fortnight.

MOVIES SHOW REFEREE BIASED

By ED FRAYNE.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—The alacrity with which Referee Dave Barry rushed to count over the fallen Dempsey in the eight round, and the deliberation with which he approached the stricken Tunney in the previous round became the topic of the hour in the heavyweight championship debates here last night.

This new and strange sidelight to the spectacle of Soldier Field was brought to light by the first showing of the motion pictures. The film was playing to capacity houses here.

Dempsey partisans left the theater loudly proclaiming that their man had been counted out of the championship. Barry was being bitterly criticized for his action in the seventh round, but even stronger complaints were based on his work in the eighth.

The pictures plainly show that Barry had started to count over Dempsey in the eighth an instant after Tunney had upset the Californian with a right to the head. At the time he had started to count, Tunney was walking toward a corner, but he was looking backward toward Dempsey. Dempsey was not hurt by the blow to any extent, and was up in a flash.

ANGRY CATCALLS HEARD

Angry catcalls arose from the Dempsey crowd in the seventh, after their man had scored the knockdown which they claim should have been a knockout.

Slow motion pictures of that thrilling incident settled the controversies that have been raging over what kind of a punch floored Tunney, what Barry actually did, and to what extent Tunney was hurt.

It proved that Tunney was driven down in a wild flurry of punching, during which Dempsey hit him no less than seven heavy blows on the jaw. Tunney was pinned on the ropes when Dempsey clipped him no less than seven heavy blows on the jaw. Tunney was pinned on the ropes when Dempsey clipped him with a stiff left to the jaw, a short, hard right to the jaw and a final crashing left that caused Tunney's knees to sag. The left hook was plainly the hardest of all the blows. As Tunney was falling, Dempsey hit him no less than four times on the head. His hands were flying like pistons.

As Tunney sat helpless on the floor, hanging on to the ropes with one hand, his eyes staring vacantly upward, Dempsey tried to push his way behind the champion. The scene took place almost in Dempsey's corner. Barry tried to prevent him from this, but Dempsey pushed past the referee and took a position standing over Tunney. Tunney was facing the other way and Dempsey was directly in back of him.

Dempsey finally realized that precious moments were passing and he started over to the opposite corner. As he did Barry took his position over Tunney and began to count. Angry cries came from all over the house while the silent struggle between boxer and referee was taking place.

GENE LOOKS HELPLESS

The picture does not bear out Tunney's contention that he was able to get up at the count of three. In fact, he still looked so helpless at seven that it seemed impossible that he would beat the count. The picture shown here was deleted just before he crawled up. It did not show him arising.

Dempsey hit the floor in the following round and Barry was on him with upraised hand before most of the ringsiders had realized what had happened. Ironical laughter arose from the spectators as the referee came flying forward.

Boxing writers who viewed the film were struck by the manner in which Tunney's accuracy improved as the fight wore on. He was missing right hands by a mile during the early rounds. In the closing rounds he was an expert marksman. He gave Dempsey a terrific shellacing in the closing round. He also landed one right to the jaw in the fourth that knocked Dempsey's head back.

PENN STATE OPENS TODAY WITH LEBANON VALLEY

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 24.—(INS.)—Undaunted by a series of minor injuries to first-string backs, the Nittany Lions of Pennsylvania State College today prepared for its initial gridiron test.

State meets Lebanon Valley College here in the season's opener, at the same time ushering in Coach Hugo Bezdek's tenth year as coach. Miller and Craig, halfbacks, suffered injuries during scrimmage early in the week, and Darragh and Hastings, guards, also are nursing minor bruises which may keep them out of the play.

While Bezdek does not expect to call upon these men to start the game, he is not underrating the Lebanon Valley gridders, and is prepared to use his whole squad in the initial competition.

FRANKIE KLICK STOPS O'BRIEN IN SEVENTH

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—(US.)—Frankie Klick of San Francisco won a technical knockout over Tommy O'Brien, of Portland, in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. O'Brien was badly outclassed and the referee stopped the fight to save him further punishment.

Pirates Must Win Six If Rivals Take All

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The Giants, who made it two out of three by scoring a sensational victory over Pittsburgh yesterday, tackle the Pirates for the last time today in a game that undoubtedly will make or break the New Yorkers. They are only two and one-half games behind the leaders this morning, but must win the final game in order to stay in the running.

A victory for New York also would revive the drooping Cardinals, whose defeat by the Boston Braves yesterday cost them second place and left them three full games behind Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh still needs six victories in its remaining eight games to clinch the pennant, provided New York and St. Louis make a clean sweep. Even if the Pirates win only five out of eight, however, the Giants and Cardinals cannot afford to lose a single game. The standing:

Bet On Gene, Refuses Pay

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(INS.)—Sam Zaret of Far Rockaway, who won $2,500 when Gene Tunney was given a decision over Jack Dempsey Thursday night, has refused to accept his winnings because he believes Tunney was knocked out fairly by Dempsey in the seventh round. "I believe he received a 'long count,'" Zaret explained.

Independent Gridders To Lift Lid Today

By TOM BIRKS.

The prying off of the lid on independent football will be accomplished today in many parts of the tri-state territory with a score of clubs swinging into action. However quite a number of the better known clubs will not start activities until tomorrow or next week at the latest, according to the schedules that have been announced by managers in the district.

McChesneytown, classed as one of the leading contenders last season, will start operations today opposed to the Blythedale Tornadoes, and fans will watch with interest the doings of the club that put the Pitcairn Mohawks out of the eliminations last season.

Fans in the Tube City will have plenty to enthuse over when the McKeesport Olympics come back again into the field after a brief absence from competitive football. The Olympics will meet the Monessen Olympics at Cycler Park.

Out in Port Vue, one of the football playing suburbs of the Tube City, the Port Vue Odds will meet the Mohawks." This is a local battle and plenty of action is expected to be flashed.

Not all of the sport lovers of the South Hills will be at Bellevue, for some of the fans with football in their blood will stay at home to hie to Warrington Park where the Beltzhoover Scholastics meet the Sullivans.

Out in Forest Hills, the Braddock Park Arrows and the Chalfont Tigers, from across the way, will tangle in another local derby, while independent gridiron followers of the North Side will be able to get an afternoons sport when Marshall Tech meets the Leetsdale Odds.

This part of the independent gridiron card will give followers of the game plenty of action in all corners of the district, as part of the opening day.

FOOTBALL STAR SAVED BY TEAMMATE'S BLOOD

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Sept. 24.—Blood, furnished by Walter Smith, a teammate, probably saved the life of John Ulrich, 16, local high school football star at a hospital here yesterday. When friends of Ulrich were notified of his critical condition, three members of the football team volunteered to supply the needed blood, Smith being selected after tests by physicians. Ulrich is suffering from pyemia.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

TAMPA, Fla.—Ben Pound, Winter Park, Fla., knocked out Soldier Eddie Benson, New York, (6). Jack Davis, Tulsa, won by a technical knockout from Jim Hart, Wabash, Ind., (2).

PHILADELPHIA—Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, defeated Jim O'Dowd, Jacksonville, Fla., (10). Joe Wilson scored a technical knockout over Frankie Nelson, Wilmington, Del., (8).

TUNNEY VISITS IN CLEVELAND

By HERBERT WESTEN,

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24.—Gene Tunney, tickled as a school boy over retaining his tile, arrived here last night to spend the week-end with friends far from the crowds. Tunney looked tired, but he was jubilant.

"Dempsey was beaten by psychology," he said. "He knew I was his mental superior. It was a good example of how the elemental theories of life work out in practice.

"Jack was worried to death when he went into the ring. He was worried over my reported reaction to the open letter he addressed to me, and he was worried over my confidence and ring generalship. Jack knew he would have to wait me out and watch his chance. He was fighting a heartbreaking fight, for I was master, even when I was sitting on the floor during that seventh round.

"Dempsey is always nervous before he goes into a big fight, but Thursday night he was more than that. He was faced by a man he considered his mental superior in ring generalship. That had an effect on him. Perhaps it was not fear so much as it was mystification.

"Jack expected anything from me Thursday night and he was too busy considering what I might do to get in and take a chance. If Dempsey had taken the chances with me Thursday night that he did in Philadelphia a year ago he would have been knocked out during the first two rounds."

Tunney was unmarred except for a slight swelling behind his neck where Jack's rabbit blows had punished him.

The champion, after his brief 40-minute experience acting the role of the boxer, had once more resumed his cultural exterior.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

IN VIEW of all the arguments and debates that still are in progress among fight fans over the so-called long count given to Gene Tunney when Jack Dempsey sent him to the floor in the seventh round of Thursday night's battle in Chicago, it may be timely to print the rule covering such a situation in a modern glove contest.

The original Marquis of Queensberry rules provided that if either principal be knocked down or fall through weakness he must get up unassisted or lose the fight, ten seconds to be allowed him to do so, "THE OTHER MAN MEANWHILE TO RETURN TO HIS OWN CORNER."

NOT until years afterward was it discovered that the rules made no provision for the situation that would arise if a man were knocked down in his opponent's corner. To be in his own corner, the fighter still on his feet must naturally stand right over his fallen foe.

In order to remedy this, the powers that be in the modern boxing game got busy and revised the Queensberry code.

As a result, the rule governing a knockdown, Section 11 of the revised Queensberry regulations, now reads as follows:

"If a contestant slip down he must get up again immediately. His opponent must stand back out of distance until the fallen man is on his feet, when the contest shall be resumed. A contestant who has knocked down his opponent must immediately walk to his own corner, but should the fallen man be knocked down in that corner, the contestant delivering the knockdown SHALL RETIRE TO THE FARTHEST CORNER. A man knocked down must rise in ten seconds or lose the fight."

IN Thursday night's bout Dempsey walked to his own corner, which chanced to be the nearest, and Referee Dave Barry was only enforcing the rules as he interpreted them when he made Dempsey walk to the farthest corner before he began to count over Tunney.

It was evidently his judgment that Tunney was down so near to Dempsey's corner that if Jack merely retired to his own corner it would be a violation of the spirit of the rules, and that was his reason for ordering Dempsey to the farthest corner before beginning the count. The referee is the sole judge in such matters.

And Dempsey might have walked to the farthest corner in the first place if his manager, Leo P. Flynn, had not called and beckoned him to his own corner, to which position the referee objected. So the supposedly smart Mr. Flynn himself appears to have been the cause of the "long count" against which he is now protesting.

AFTER 25 years as the commander-in-chief of the Giants, the "master mind" on the bench in all the battles fought by his team, Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Nationals is off the job and out for the remainder of the season.

About a month ago McGraw suffered what he at first thought was only a trifling injury, but in a short time blood poisoning developed from it and McGraw's condition became so serious that he was ordered to bed, where he remained for 17 days.

He is now on the road to recovery, but though he came to Pittsburgh this week with President Charles A. Stoneham of the New York club to witness the Pirate-Giant series, he is taking no hand in the running of his team on the field.

THE Giant leader has not given a solitary single order in any of the games here this week, and it is said to be his intention not to sit on the New York bench during another game this season, leaving the direction and handling of the team on the field entirely in the hands of Capt. Rogers Hornsby.

Whether or not McGraw would change his mind in event of the Giants' winning the pennant and getting into the world series is a question that no one connected with the New York club is prepared to answer. It is the opinion of the average fan that somebody would have a nice

FANS REMAIN DIVIDED ON FIGHT RESULT

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Tele Sports Editor.

The argument over the long count Gene Tunney received when he was knocked down by Jack Dempsey in the seventh round of their battle in the Soldier Field Stadium, Chicago, Thursday night, threatens to become one of long memory. It will go down in history along with the question of whether or not Jack Sharkey was fouled in his bout with Dempsey, in New York a few months ago and other notable incidents of the prize ring.

Staying over in Chicago yesterday to take in the aftermath of the big scrap, I found the fans busily buzzing over the matter, and each had his own private opinion of what happened.

The thought seemed to be general though, that Dempsey should have won. He was the city's favorite before the fight and there was general disappointment that technicality seemingly had deprived him of his one big chance to achieve victory. The fact that he was outclassed all the rest of the way ran for Sweeny with the fans. They were willing to let Tunney outbox Jack throughout if Jack just would come through with a finishing wallop. Then, when the million-dollar moment arrived and Tunney got the benefit of the long, or rather delayed count, and the fans were apprised through the newspapers that the job had been bungled, they fairly "burned up."

ACCEPTED RULING

It matters little with these fans that Tunney could have got up at the count of nine even if the toll had been begun at once, and that he had his mental faculties working when he deliberately took full advantage of the rest period. It matters little also to these fans who are disappointed because Dempsey lost that the count was perfectly legal according to the Illinois boxing rule, which had been explained to both Tunney and Dempsey beforehand.

The rule on knockdowns says that when a man is knocked down his opponent shall retire to the farthest corner, meanwhile, the knockdown timekeeper shall begin the count as soon as the stricken man is down. After seeing that the man who scored the knockdown has retired to the farthest corner, the referee shall pick up the count with the timekeeper, starting at once instead of at the count of the timekeeper. This rule was followed to the letter, and Tunney listened attentively to the referee and got up just inside the dead line.

In New York the rule works differently. There the referee, after seeing that the man retires to the farthest corner, picks up the count with the timekeeper at the timekeeper's count. In Pittsburgh the timekeeper does not toll off the seconds, but the referees do not begin to count until the man has retired to the farthest corner.

I have seen several instances of 14 and 15-second knockdowns and knockouts under the latter system.

It is too bad that Tunney's otherwise clean-cut victory should be clouded by a technicality. He was a front-runner at every other stage of the bout before and after being knocked down and had Dempsey on the verge of oblivion in the fourth, ninth and tenth rounds. Jack could not have gone on another round when the end came. His only bid for a comeback victory was that solitary splurge in the seventh round. He pulled a Leach Cross on Gene, feigning grogginess and taking the champion off his guard, whereupon he

Tunney Count Long but Fair, Writers Agree

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—The disputed seventh round of the Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney heavyweight championship battle here finds Chicago sport writers unanimous in the opinion that the count was long, and yet fair.

Warren Brown of the Chicago Herald-Examiner summed up the situation in the following words:

"The letter of the law was obeyed. Tunney was actually on the floor longer than 10 seconds. There is no argument on the length of time he was down. The law says that the count shall not start until the man who has delivered the knockdown shall have repaired to a neutral corner. Tunney was merely taking advantage of the full count of nine to which he was entitled."

Walter Eckersall of the Chicago Tribune expressed a coinciding opinion. "There was a legal delay which permitted Tunney to be on the floor more than 10 seconds," said Eckersall. "However it was within the rules of the boxing commission."

Opinions of other Chicago writers were:

Jimmy Corcoran, Chicago American: "Certainly the count stopped and the members of the boxing commission who were at the ringside seem agreed that the manner in which the counting was conducted was absolutely in accord with their judgment."

Harry Hochstadter, Chicago Post: "It was a nine count."

Fred Hayner, Chicago News: "The count started slowly and went to nine—how slowly it probably will never be told."

Joe Foley, Chicago Journal: "Referee Barry ordered Jack into a neutral corner when Jack tried to go into his own and stopped the count."

FROSTY PETERS QUITS STUDIES AT ILLINOIS

URBANA, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Frosty Peters, dropkicking ace of the University of Illinois, has read himself out of the football lineup for this season. An injured knee was the reason given by Peters, who also announced that he would not attend the university before the February term at the earliest.

As a freshman at the University of Montana Peters was credited with making a world's record of 17 dropkicks in one game.

ADELMAN IS STOPPED IN HOLLYWOOD BOUT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Boy Wally, Singaport, won a technical knockout over Dave Adelman in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout to oust the Pennsylvania fighter from the flyweight elimination contest started when Fidel La Barba vacated the throne.

man Plitt, flied to Joe Harris, visions of an important victory were strong. But Hill lost all control of the ball with Heinie Mueller at bat and his lapse proved very costly. Fred Lindstrom, who in the big seventh injected a lucky single that put the Pirates in a jam, nicked Hill for a real hit in the last round. Lindstrom, however, had another big piece of fortune when his drive to center took a high hop away from Sprout Waner and was recorded as a triple. Besides scoring the tieing tally, the hit put the winning marker on third. And then came another break.

YOUNGSTER'S THROW WIDE

Hill and Earl Smith were working hard on Eddie Roush when he hit a medium-distance fly to Sprout. The youngster played the loft cleverly and let drive for the plate in a jiffy. But Lloyd does not have the same force that Cuyler or Brother Paul possesses and besides his toss pulled Earl Smith just far enough to one side that Lindstrom swished over on a disputed play. The decision was protested by the Pirates.

Yet the Pirates had a grand chance to win in their half. Barnhart batted for Hill and walked. Larry Benton had just gone to the mound for the foe. Brickell ran for Barnhart. Sprout Waner came through with his fourth hit of the game and Brickell stopped at second.

And then another of those breaks that were favoring the Giants much of the day. Comorosky's bunt looked like plenty of trouble for the Giants, but Benton made a thrilling one-hand scoop of the ball and Lindstrom was dashing for the bag to take a snap throw that cut off Brickell.

SUCCEEDS IN FRANTIC PLAY

Had Benton failed in his desperate try there would have been three Pirates on with none out. Alas, Paul Waner, who has been in a slump, grounded out. Sprout Waner and Comorosky advanced on the grounder, which put the matter up to Wright. Glenn was called out on strikes without taking his bat off his shoulder. And thus came the climax to a game in which the Buccos looked like anything but champions in many instances.

Captain Traynor tripled in the first inning with the bases loaded. Pie followed the trio over the sacks on Grantham's fly. In the third Pie connected for a single with two out to score Comorosky with the fifth Pittsburgh tally. Traynor's brilliance stood out, but the actions of some of the others were "not so good."

Lindstrom's lucky hit that caused so much regret came after Hill had walked Mueller to fill the sacks with two out in the seventh. Lindstrom dropped a Texas Leaguer in center and Sprout Waner's throw to Traynor was low. When the dust lifted Lindstrom was on third and three runs were in. Roush was retired, but the Pirates could not hold to their one-run lead.

Series to Open Here Oct. 5—If Bucs Win

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Commissioner K. M. Landis has completed the schedule for the World's Series.

The first two games between the Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates, in the event the latter club wins the National League pennant, will be played in the Steel City on October 5 and 6. The next three games will be played in New York, October 7, 8 and 9, with a return to Pittsburgh for the other two games if necessary.

In the event St. Louis Cardinals come out ahead of the Pirates in the chase for the much-coveted bunting, the first two games between the Cardinals and the Yankees will be played in St. Louis on October 5 and 6. The next three games will be played in New York October 8, 9 and 10, allowing one day for railroad travel and returning again to St. Louis if necessary.

Prices will be the same as during the last year's world series, $6, $5, $3 and $1. All games will begin at 1:30 p. m., except on Sunday, when the game will start half an hour later.

RECORD BREAKER

LLOYD (SPROUT) WANER

An "unseasoned" rookie in the spring, a record-breaking big leaguer in the fall—that, in brief, is the story of Lloyd Waner's 1927 baseball achievement. The youthful Buc outfielder is the first player ever to get more than 200 hits in his first year in the "big show," and he has shattered the modern record for total one-base hits in a single season.

time to recover and that cost me the championship."

NOT HOPEFUL IN PROTEST

While Dempsey has little hope of getting the commission to alter the decision, he said he felt justified in filing the protest. Regarding Tunney, he said:

"Tunney is a great boxer. I don't suppose there is a better skilled man in the ring. But I can whip him. I knocked him out Thursday night and I can do it again."

Dempsey denied that his ring career is over.

"Of course," he said, "I may never get another fight. But I feel that I'm in as good condition as ever, and if a fellow will stand up and fight with me I can whip him.

"I read that Tunney said he didn't think the public would want to see us fight again. But I don't think the public is any too well satisfied with a champion who gets knocked down for 13 to 16 seconds at a time."

Dempsey said he disliked running the chances of being called a "squawker," adding:

"But I guess the public knows me well enough to know that I'm not going to complain unless I have a real grievance.

"I honestly believe I had Tunney knocked out. And I believe I could do it again."

GENE DENIES ENTERING COLLEGE

By EUGENE FOWLER,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—It is now the battle of the aftermaths. Chicago, with its many thousands of visiting firemen, experts, winners and losers, still hanging around the town, talking, speaking, uttering and just plain conversing.

"Was it a long count?"

That is one of the argumentative points that has the boys blue in the face. It seems that every heavyweight clash must have its argumentative points.

There are not a few who claim they clocked the game and heady Tunney for 14 or 15 seconds on the resin-rug that he kissed in that memorable seventh round.

Tunney, himself, in a talk with this correspondent, said that he could have arisen after the first two seconds were tolled in the exciting ring angelus, he added:

TRIED FOR KNOCKOUT

"This, indeed, was a new experience for me. Never before had I been felled to the floor. Why, I wasn't hurt at all. I was dazed for a moment, because I ran into a left, then a right and a succeeding left. After this, instead of being stung, as I have been—for instance in the Greb fight—I thought it would be far more comfortable to go to the canvas.

"If I had not run into those loose punches, I know that I should have knocked Dempsey kicking, regardless of his so-called iron jaw. I was trying to knock him out from the very first. Perhaps I tried too hard. I was missing with many of my right hands, the sort that I do not miss with often."

"Don't you think," he was asked, "that you should have had more boxing than you did?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I am a good judge of my training methods. I won the fight and that should be the answer. However, the layoffs, on account of the injuries to my eye, made it possible for lot of dulling to occur in my sharpshooting."

Asked if he thought Dempsey could have gone much further than he did last night, Tunney replied:

"I think he might have stayed another round. But he certainly would have gone out in 12."

Tunney denied a current report that he has matriculated for Notre Dame. Still, many insiders say that Tunney has an ambition to get a college degree to keep pace with his close friend, Eddie Egan, Oxford and Yale athlete.

Robertson Scores K. O. Over Jack Elkhart

Knockouts marked the opening boxing show presented by the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Duquesne Garden last night, Homer Robertson, formerly of Pittsburgh, but now of Boston, sending Indian Jack Elkhart of the Middle West down for the count in the sixth round of the main bout.

The show was filled with action from the first gong and proved one of the best staged here in several years.

Robertson had his hands full scoring his clean-cut victory over his Indian opponent, sending him to the mat twice before he succeeded in putting him away for the count.

Ray Shafer of Bloomfield won the decision from Charlie Tarzan of Rochester in the semi-final, Tarzan taking the count of eight twice, although he managed to stay the limit.

Teddy Welsh of McKeesport drew with Young Rudy after being sent to the canvas in the first round of the second battle on the program. Rudy opened a vicious attack on his rival and scored his knockdown in the opening stanza, the bell saving his opponent after the referee had counted nine. Welsh made a strong comeback and managed to earn a draw at the end of six rounds.

Monte Sirko, artilleryman, and Jackie Richards of the North Side met in the opener, with the former winning the decision without trouble. Red Robinson was the third man in the ring.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

JIM CORBETT and his party were not the only celebrities at Forbes Field yesterday. Al Lang, foremost citizen of St. Petersburg, Fla., was on hand, and Pittsburgh likes to regard her own Al as a celebrity. Lang, to Florida is the same as another Al is to the State of New York. Lang has no presidential aspirations, but the former Pittsburgher could be elected for any office within the gift of Floridans.

FRIEND AL is not in the real estate business, but he says Florida has made a great comeback and will be a very popular spot about the time the folks are breaking their New Year's resolutions—and you can take that any way you want it, although the first thought was to declare that Florida will be a comfortable place to some folks in January.

LANG is the same son of Allegheny county who induced the major league teams to come to Florida. He "points with pride" to the fact that no less than 11 are training in his adopted state, and he "views with alarm" the persistency with which B. Dreyfuss takes the Pirates to California. But Al is pulling hard for the Pirates to win the flag, even if they have not partaken of the joys of Florida in recent years.

JIMMY SMITH, another famed son of Pittsburgh, had an even lighter step yesterday, and Greenfield Jim generally bounces around with the lightness of Pat Rooney. The reason for Jim's added exuberance was the decision in the big bout in Chicago. In a recent talk with the former diamond performer I was told that Tunney was bound to win.

"Fellows like Tunney and Pie Traynor cannot be licked in anything," said Jimmie. "They live the cleanest kind of lives and are always in top condition."

JIMMIE, by the way, is quite a golfer. In his knee-pants days he was a caddie on the Schenley links, and caddies rarely forget the form which they continually practice. Jim hits a long ball off the tee and looks the part of a pro as he does it. The Greenfield member, it develops, has purchased a home in Squirrel Hill, where he resides with Mrs. Smith and two little darlings.

EAST'S ELEVENS IN "WARMUP" GAMES TODAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(INS.)—Football swings its light artillery into action today. Many of the leading Eastern teams will engage in "warm-up" contests with smaller opponents, led to the slaughter to provide a Roman holiday for the big fellows.

Overwhelming victories for the more powerful teams are not a certainty, however, as some of the weaker outfits may cause upsets by using the new lateral pass. Many coaches have not yet perfected an airtight defense against this form of attack.

The University of Pennsylvania eleven, which plays Franklin Marshall today, will be watched closely by Eastern fans. Penn faces the toughest schedule in the country and even in today's opener they are likely to encounter considerable opposition.

Brown's "iron men" will tackle Rhode Island State and the strong New York University eleven plays Niagara. With a weak line and only one 1926 regular, Capt. Ray Barbuti, available, Syracuse opens against Hobart.

Columbia, with a backfield strengthened by the unexpected return of Hank Kumpff to college, was prepared for another hard battle with Vermont. Bethany provided the opposition for Fordham, making its first start under Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, formerly Boston College coach.

Other Eastern games include Amherst vs. Alfred, Cornell vs. Clarkson, Dartmouth vs. Norwich, Georgetown vs. Lenoir-Rhyne, Lafayette vs. Schuylkill, Lehigh vs. St. John's, Penn State vs. Lebanon Valley, Pittsburgh vs. Thiel, Rensselaer vs. Williams, Army vs. Boston University, Union vs. St. Lawrence, West Virginia vs. West Virginia Wesleyan, William and Mary vs. Catholic University, and Wesleyan vs. Colby.

WEST COAST LIFTS LID

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Led by Stanford, 1926 champion, six grid elevens of the Pacific Coast Conference open the 1927 season today, after 10 days of intensive fall practice.

The Stanford Cardinals will probably face the hardest test of any of the teams, meeting both Fresno State and San Francisco Olympic Club in an opening day double-header. The University of California, after two disastrous seasons, meets Santa Clara.

University of Southern California clashes with Occidental in its first game, while Washington State College tackles Mount St. Charles. Oregon, the remaining conference team to open activities, takes on Linfield.

GEORGE GETZ LANS TO HUNT IN AFRICA

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Now that George F. Getz, millionaire Chicago coal dealer and official promoter of the Tunney-Dempsey fight, has helped Tex Rickard bag the largest sport throng in the history of fistiana, he is primed to tackle probably his greatest objective—the wild game of Africa.

The Chicago sportsman, accompanied by four friends, plans to sail from New York September 27.

Mr. Getz' chief ambition, he said, is to bag a baby hippopotamus for a pet.

Title Game At Bellevue

By TOM BIRKS.

THE THIRD and last stanza of that death grip battle for the championship of the Allegheny County League will be fought today at the Bellevue High School field when Bellevue and Beltzhoover, each with a victory tucked under the belt, clash in the deciding game of the series.

It will take more than the presence of those Pesky Giants in our midst to prevent sandlotters from trekking to the home of the North Boroughs Club when memories of the first and second clashes of the series are recalled.

Beltzhoover, counted out before the real race had begun, is fighting to inscribe that old sandlot name on the scroll of the trophy of the Loop, emblematic of the championship of Western Pennsylvania's leading circuit. Opposed to that fighting little band from the South Hills is the cool calculating aggregation led by Cy Rheam, every member of the outfit practically a veteran on the sandlots, that has been through the hard battles that come in semi-pro baseball.

Bellevue, according to last minute gossip, again will give Art Shaw the most important assignment of the season. Shaw practically won the first game himself with a wonderful performance, but lost the second decision when the Barrett combination refused to be beaten at McKinley Park. Opposed to Shaw probably will be Foster, who had tough luck in the opening battle.

It takes a good club to defeat Bellevue at home. Coach Barrett feels that his club can turn the trick. One would have a hard time convincing Harry Yerx that any sandlot combination can defeat Rheam, Swetonic, Waite, Miller and the rest of the boys. It is going to be a battle, and the banner crowd of the season is expected when the umpires call "play ball."

GRID

start of the World's Series, the fans will have an opportunity to turn in some more or less rabid cheering as a fair sized handful of college elevens swing into action this afternoon.

PITT MEETS THIEL

Pittsburgh proper is chiefly concerned with the doings of Jock Sutherland's Pitt team and Thiel in the Stadium and the outcome of the Carnegie Tech-Westminster and Duquesne-St. Bonaventure fracas on foreign lots. The Tartans battle the United Presbyterians at Youngstown and the Dubious Dukes will engage St. Bonventure at Olean, N. Y.

There are four other games of interest to the Tri-state district as a whole. Bethany invades New York for a battle with Fordham. West Virginia University and West Virginia Wesleyan, rivals since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, square off at Buckhannon. Davis-Elkins, with Cam Henderson at the helm, will come out of the inner regions of West Virginia to battle the doughty Covenanter eleven of Geneva College at Beaver Falls. W. & J., hoping for a district title, meets a fair test at Waynesburg. Penn State will face a tough and veteran Lebanon Valley eleven at State College.

PUPILS MEET PUPILS

There is a strange angle connected with the three games involving Pittsburgh teams. All three will be contests in which students of the same school will be pitted against each other. Tech, with a Steffen trained Bob Waddell in charge, will meet a Tech-coached United Presbyterian eleven. Pitt, a Warner-Sutherland system eleven will face another Warner style team in Thiel, coached by Dr. T. V. Holleran, one of the greatest quarterbacks ever to wear Pitt's blue and gold. And Duquesne, with a former Rockne ace in command, will have another Rockne-spirited machine as a hurdle.

Verily, it will be a tough day for the systems.

It is very difficult to see victories for Thiel and Westminster. Both elevens will be far out of their depth—and while they may have powerful enough teams when it comes to facing clubs in their class, they will be outweighed, out-experienced and probably out-punched today.

They will put up true blue battles, and will die fighting, which after all, is what counts. It will mean more for Pitt to wallop Thiel by 30 points than it will for the Panthers to beat a team in their class.

Youngstown is making a holiday of some sort out of the visit Westminster and Tech are making. The attraction of course, is the Tech eleven, the machine that walloped dear old Notre Dame last fall. Youngstown is a Notre Dame stronghold, and there will be 10,000 fans out to see Harpster and Puri Anderson and the rest of the gang in action.

Five Sixty Dumps Jockey and Leads Across Wire

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Dumping Jockey L. Geving at the very first turn, Five Sixty finished the mile and 70 yards in a race at Hawthorne yesterday riderless but still out in front.

This turned the official verdict over to the second horse, Transfer, known hereabouts as a consistent failure. In more than 100 starts, Transfer never won a race until yesterday, and finished in the money but once. Geving was not badly hurt. Jockey Lee Hardy was "sit down" for the rest of the meeting for causing the spill.

KECK

rushed in with a show of his old tiger-like fury and hammered Gene to the floor before the astonished crowd could realize what had happened. But Gene quickly collected himself and fought his way out of the hole and went on to victory.

The better man won; there is no doubt about that. Nor is there any doubt that Tunney could repeat the triumph time after time, with all due respect to Dempsey's game stand. It is generally admitted that as a fighter of championship caliber he is now all washed up. He probably never will fight again. It looks like Tunney and Sharkey for next summer. Tunney will beat the Bostonian. Gene always manages to be just good enough to win, and he figures to remain champion for at least several more years.

Manager Leo P. Flynn's terrific squawk about the delayed count and his demand that the decision be reversed are ridiculous. Once the fight was permitted to go on after Tunney's knockdown, all ground for argument was out. As a matter of fact, but for advice from Flynn in his corner, Dempsey might not have lost so much time getting to a neutral corner and there might have been a different story to tell. Men near Dempsey's corner tell me Flynn shouted for Jack to come there.

An angle was brought up yesterday by some of the gang who lost money on Dempsey and professed to believe that they had been gypped and that it wasn't in the cards for Dempsey to win. They called attention to the fact that Jimmy Bronson, Tunney's chief second, went across the ring and shook hands with Referee Dave Barry the moment the latter came in.

"Say," a prominent manager of boxers told me in discussing this phase of the controversy, "do you think I would have stood for anything like that if I had been in Flynn's shoes? Not at all. I would have jumped right in there and yelled my head off, telling the world that there was too much of a show of friendliness between the referee and Tunney's man and demand a new referee, anybody but the referee in the ring."

Gee, a guy has to be careful with whom he speaks these days.

REMOVE SEATS

Signs of the big battle were speedily removed. Workmen were busy removing the temporary seats yesterday. The press headquarters in the Palmer House were cleaned out and a "for rent" sign was on the window and the ticket headquarters were locked up.

Tex Rickard was clearing up his post-fight details at the Congress Hotel and planned to leave for New York soon. The visitors to the city were gone and the hotel lobbies were almost empty. All of the tenseness was out of the air. Only the long arguments remained—those and bitter disappointment for the folks who prayed for Dempsey to be the first heavyweight champion to come back.

The fans availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing the movies of the fight at various theaters and carefully noted the slow action showing of the seventh round. Meanwhile rumors were in circulation to the effect that Tunney and his cohorts had nipped in the bud a lot to put the fight in the bag for Dempsey by forcing the comission to switch referee and place wealthy amateur sportsmen in the judges' seats.

job keeping John J. off that Giant bench in a world series.

McGRAW has not made any public statement as to what he thinks of Pittsburgh's chances against the Yankees if the Pirates are world series contenders, but judging from a remark that he made on the occasion of his silver managerial jubilee in New York in July, he will pick the Buccaneers as winners.

The chief of the Giants was in a peeved mood at the time as a result of a statement that Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn club had given to the newspapers to the effect that the Yankees of 1927 were a better club than the old Baltimore Orioles, of which club both McGraw and Robinson were members, and that the present-day sluggers of Miller Huggins would have beaten Hanlon's champions of 1894, 1895 and 1896 at the latter's best.

"I don't think they could have done anything of the sort," McGraw declared. "In any test between the two teams I think the Orioles would have had all the better of it. Just wait until these Yankee birds get up against one of our strong National League clubs in the world series. They'll see some curve-ball pitching that may not make them look so good."

THE regular baseball season of 1927 in Pittsburgh comes to a close with this afternoon's game between the Pirates and the Giants, and though they still have seven games to play on the road the Buccaneers will not be seen on the home grounds again this year in a National League game, though, as every fan in the district hopes, they will be back in October to battle with the Yankees in the world series.

While the curtain falls on local National League baseball today, the lid will be lifted on football. The 1927 gridiron season will be formally opened this afternoon.

Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth and a few of the other big teams will not get under way until next Saturday, but the majority of the college elevens throughout the country will swing into action today.

Pitt and Thiel will furnish the only local attraction at the stadium, as Carnegie Tech will open in Youngstown with Westminster, and Duquesne University is in Olean, N. Y., to play St. Bonaventure.

General indications point to the best season in recent years throughout the country.

Toledo Mud Hens Tied for Lead In Association

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—An ambition, nursed and shattered for a quarter of a century by the breaks of baseball, may at last be realized by the Toledo Mud Hens. That ambition is an American Association pennant.

Backed by the steadying and brilliant play of a group of former major league stars, Toledo today stood tied at the top of the league with the Milwaukee Brewers. And the end of the season is but two days away.

An elemental "break"—darkness—yesterday robbed the Mud Hens of an opportunity of taking undisputed possession of first place. By reason of Milwaukee's 9 to 5 defeat by St. Paul and their own 5 to 2 victory over Indianapolis in the first game of a twin bill, the Hens jumped into a leadership tie with the Brewers. They then started out after their second victory, but the nightcap was called in the eighth inning with the score knotted at one-all.

Panthers Get Luminous Helmets

COACH JOCK SUTHERLAND has ordered luminous headgears for his Pitt gridders. In ordinary weather the Pitt helmets are white and shiny, but when the shades of night begin to fall the luminous headgears stand out like so many lighthouses in a fog. All the passers have to do is aim at the "torch."

Many High School Grid Tilts Carded Today

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Yesterday marked the beginning of a mighty big scholastic football season, but today is another. While the majority of local schools will not swing into action, except for practice scrimmages until the latter part of next week, there are several games to the card for this afternoon that ought to be close to interesting.

Avalon's eleven will journey out to the Holy City to face Coach Carroll's Wilkinsburg crew. Bellevue's McGrew-trained machine will take a little trip to Ambridge to test out that school's combination.

Among other games scheduled today are: East Huntingdon Township at Latrobe, Farrell vs. Alumni; Freedom at Woodlawn, Swissvale at Greensburg, Oil City at Greenville, New Bethlehem at Grove City, Redstone Township at Jeannette, Midland at New Brighton, Waynesburg at Monessen, Monaca at Monongahela, West Newton at Mt. Pleasant, New Kensington at Verona, North Union at Uniontown, Sewickley at Norwin, Parnassus at Springdale, Rochester at Apollo, South Union at Scottdale, Sharon at Warren, O.; Sandy Lake at West Middlesex, Confluence at Youngwood; Beaver Falls at Sharpsville.

The only local school to swing into action again yesterday was Ben Avon. After getting a 7-0 beating at the hands of Mars in its inaugural a week previous, Mathes' eleven came back to eke out a 14-12 triumph over Dormont's weakened crew. Har-Brack must have a fairly lively squad this year, for it smothered Arnold's machine under a 39-0 avalanche. Beaver won over the Bluefield Reserves, 6 to 0.

LAMPUS MEETS VICTOR

Robert Lampus of Bellevue High School became interscholastic tennis champion yesterday when he defeated Frank Casey of Homestead High School, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, in the final of the Harvard cup matches played on the University Club courts. It is the first leg on the coveted trophy for the Bellevue school.

MANUFACTURERS SEEK TO CURB GOLF PROS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(UP.)—Golf ball manufacturers, oppressed, they say, by the expense of providing free ball to professionals, have turned. Today they sought and received government aid in co-operating on plans to cut down on the revenue which enables "pros" to purchase town cars and figured golf sox.

The Federal Trade Commission announced a trade conference, called on request of a majority of golf ball makers, to seek an agreement to stop the practices of furnishing balls free and paying salaries to professionals to advertise their products.

Manufacturers apparently fear to discontinue the practice unless their competitors promise to do likewise.

Professionals may be invited to present their great needs for free golf balls, commission officials said, although the announcement indicated only manufacturers would take part in the meeting, time and place of which will be announced later.

The announcement told of complaints against paying special prize money to golfers who win tournaments using special balls, as well as subsidizing pros by gifts of free balls and making special balls for use in matches and tournaments.

ESTELLE THINKS JACK WINNER

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Estelle Taylor believes her "hunch" that Jack Dempsey would win the fight is in no way affected by the judges' decision.

"I said Jack would defeat Gene Tunney, and in my estimation the honors of the battle are his. Mr. Tunney was on the floor 15 seconds, the timekeeper admitted, and while I have never seen a prize fight I agree with all of our friends and many others that Jack won the fight."

Estelle and Jack had a quiet luncheon in their apartment at the Edgewater Beach Hotel with J. A. Auerbach, Jack's first manager, who had come in from Salt Lake for the battle. Neither Estelle or Jack looked as if they were unhappy or bothered about Thursday night's events.

In fact very little was said about the fight. Both are eager to get home to Hollywood. They will go to New York today for a brief visit and then home to the coast where Jack will enjoy his comfortable home on Los Feliz boulevard, and a well-earned vacation.

There was a report that Estelle would urge Jack to contest the decision and I asked her if she were in favor of having Jack protest the judges' conclusion.

"Any statement on that subject will have to come from the men. Jack has never in his life quarreled with a fight decision. I know I have never been as proud of him as I am at this moment."

There were hundreds and hundreds of telegrams and letters urging Jack to contest the judges' decision, but he merely smiled and said, "A good loser is as important in the prize game as a good winner."

Grid Campaign Gets Under Way Today

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Football was back in the sporting spotlight today with more than 200 teams prying the lid off the 1927 season.

There was special interest in opening games because of new rules affecting the shift, the huddle and the lateral pass.

Today's schedule in the East showed such teams as Cornell, Brown, Dartmouth, Army, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Columbia, New York University, Syracuse, Penn State, Georgetown, Colgate and Lafayette in action.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Western Conference football is still one week in the future, but half a dozen games are scheduled in the Middle West today. Northwestern's football squad substituted a regulation game for today's practice work, but otherwise the Big Ten kept plugging away at the polishing process.

The annual battle between Notre Dame's varsity and freshmen was expected to give a good line on Coach Rockne's new edition of the ramblers. Today's games:

Butler vs. Indiana Normal.
Cincinnati vs. Kentucky Wesleyan.
Grinnell vs. Penn College.
Detroit vs. Adrian.
Marquette vs. St. Viator.
Michigan State vs. Kalamazoo College.

John Nye Visits Roadhouse And Offers Sally a Job As His Stenographer

What Has Gone Before

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for Mr. Peevey down town afternoons. The twins, BEAU and MILLIE, give little towards the support of the home, and so the financial load falls on Sally, too. In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman, who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Millie is Nye's secretary and he is blindly infatuated with her. Millie is fascinated by Nye's wealth, but really prefers DAVY DAVIDSON, a bond salesman, with whom she formerly worked. Davidson admires Sally, who will have nothing to do with him. Aunt Emily has given up school teaching, and turned her old country house into an inn, called "The House by the Side of the Road." Although she and Sally do all the work themselves to keep down expenses, and the food is delicious, the restaurant does not thrive, and Aunt Emily, who has put all her money into the venture, is worried and anxious. She and Sally think perhaps they are not "jazzy" enough, and hire a marimba orchestra, small but good. Mrs. Jerome complains that the family cannot get along without Sally at home to do the work, and suggests that they all move into Aunt Emily's house. Aunt Em refuses to have them there, but shortly afterward she and Sally return home from market one morning to find a moving van before the house. Aunt Em objects, but futilely.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HOWEVER, they paid no attention to it. In a week's time they were all over the house, whenever they pleased.

It was late one Sunday afternoon in early May. A golden afternoon, filled with pale sunlight and the smell of lilacs outside Aunt Emily's dining room window.

In a new lilac-colored dress that she had made with her own hands, Sally was filling salt cellars at one of the tiny tables, when she heard the rush of an automobile in the driveway.

A minute later steps came across the wide hall, and she glanced up from her work.

Her blue eyes woke to fire as she saw the tall, dark, good-looking man who stood on the threshold, smiling down at her.

Her heart quivered, gave a great throb, and then seemed to stand quite still in her body. "Idiot!" she said sharply to herself, and stood up.

The flashing, sunny smile that was one of her chief charms, came to her rescue now. It was a wonderful smile—that smile of Sally's. It had covered grief and unhappiness for her many a time, just as now it hid her embarrassment and overwhelming excitement. It was a hard-working smile.

She went forward with all the ease in the world and held out her firm little hand to him. "How nice to see you!" she cried in just the right tone of welcome.

"My, but I'm doing this well!" she told herself pridefully, as she shook his hand.

"I'll call Millie," she said in the most ordinary tone. "Won't you sit down?"

"I will," he answered, and did. "But I came to see you."

Sally was thunderstruck. Her color deepened in her cheeks, and her eyes darkened and widened with the excitement that burned within her. . . . To see her! He had come to see her! Of all things—

"Me?" she asked on an upward note.

John Nye nodded, gazing around the empty room. "How's your business?"

Sally's lips, soft and delicate as flower petals, quivered a little. "P-p-pretty well," she stammered. She was always ill at ease when she was with him.

Today it was hard for her to keep her mind on what she was saying. She kept looking at him—it was so good to see him again. His fine eyes, his ready smile, and the straight, tall body that seemed fairly to throb with the power that was in it. . . . How, she asked herself, could Millie look at a man like Davy Davidson when she could have this man? This man who was like a Greek athlete carved out of marble by some immortal sculptor.

"The Lark roadhouse down the road is going full blast, I notice," he said. "And Millie told me you and your aunt were getting pretty well discouraged here. I thought maybe you'd be selling out and looking around for another office position."

Sally's hyacinth-blue eyes swept the yard where only his brown automobile stood. She knew that there were probably 50 automobiles gathered around "The Lark" down the road, like bees around a hive.

"We're getting along beautifully," she lied, superbly and proudly. "We're not going to sell out." That much was true, anyway. They were not going to sell out their business. There was very little business to sell out, or to do anything with, as a matter of fact.

CHAPTER XLIV.

"I DIDN'T come out here to sing the blues," John said, with a serious half-smile. "But when Millie said your business wasn't as good as you expected it to be, I had an idea you might start work again. And this time I didn't want to lose you, so I thought I'd get my offer in first."

"Offer?" echoed Sally, flushed and wide-eyed above the lilac dress that brought out the beauty of her deep, blue eyes.

John nodded. "I'd start you out at $150 a month in my office," he answered quietly, and Sally shook her head.

"No. I'll stick to this until it fails or until we make a go of it," she said firmly. She looked squarely at John Nye, and his eyes held hers like a magnet.

It was at this moment that an unseen door slammed somewhere in the back of the house, and shuffling steps came slowly across the wide hall.

Mrs. Jerome stood in the doorway, her arms full of Sunday papers and magazines, her large form encased in the tight gray silk dress that she wore on Sunday afternoons. A tell-tale cake crumb was in one corner of her mouth.

She frowned at Sally, shook her head, and then gave John the most beaming smile Sally had ever seen upon her face.

"Oh, Mr. Nye!" she twittered. "I'll tell Millie you're here!" And with another frown at Sally she turned and went padding upstairs.

In a moment her voice came floating down from the upper floor: "Sally! Sal-lee-ee! I want you!"

She was standing in the middle of the hall when Sally ran up to her, still holding her papers clasped to her bosom.

"Millie wants you to powder her neck and back for her," she said, and followed Sally into the middle bedroom, where Millie held forth among her perfume bottles and boudoir pillows. Millie's room always looked like a cross between a junk shop and a fancy powder box.

She was sitting up in bed, yawning and blinking now.

"What did you wake me up for?" she demanded of her mother. "I was up so late last night—"

"I told you Mr. Nye is downstairs!" said Mrs. Jerome, importantly. She said it in the same awed voice in which she might have announced that the Archbishop of Canterbury had come to pay them all a visit.

Then she turned upon Sally. "You might have told your sister that Mr. Nye was here!" she said severely. "You knew he was here to see her and not you, Sally! I declare, you're getting to be more like your Aunt Em every day of your life. Just taking the law into your own hands about everything—"

"Mother, I told him I'd call Millie, and he said he wanted to see me!" Sally broke in, indignantly. "He offered me a position in his office."

Mrs. Jerome let out a sniff that would have done credit to Aunt Emily. "Well, that's a very queer thing!" said she, "for a man to come away out here in the country to offer you a job . . . I wouldn't trust these rich young men too far, if I were you, girls. They don't have any honorable intentions towards you, make sure of that."

"Oh, mother!" giggled Millie. "I've been running around with John Nye for months, and he's as harmless as a fly. You make me laugh!"

Mrs. Jerome managed to look wiser than an owl as she answered: "He may be as harmless as a fly, but I notice he's too clever for you, Millie."

Millie flushed. "What do you mean?"

"Why, you've been saying that he'd marry you in a minute if he could," explained her mother, her eyes narrowed above her fat

COUNTESS LEARY

Julia Crofton Leary, created a papal countess in 1907 by Pope Benedict, XV, intends to bring suit for separation from George Leary, it has been disclosed. She has been "reduced to a state of beggary and destitution," she avers, and names a telephone girl as a rival for her husband's affections.

Says 60% of Cigaret Mothers' Babies Die

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Fully 60 per cent of all babies born of cigaret-smoking mothers die before they reach the age of 2 because of nicotine poisoning, according to Dr. Chauncey L. Barber of Lansing, Mich.

"A baby born of a cigaret-smoking mother is sick," he told members of the American Association for Medico-Physical Research at its sixteenth annual convention here.

"It is poisoned and may die within two weeks after birth. The post-mortem shows degeneration of the liver, heart and other organs."

Dr. Barber went on to say that as the nervous system is easily poisoned by nicotine, it is possible for a person to get drunk on tobacco as well as on alcohol or opium. Even cases of delirium tremens as a result of tobacco indulgence are on record, he asserted.

WOMAN SHOT, POLICEMAN IS HELD

A revolver that misfired when it was aimed at the floor, but worked perfectly when it was unintentionally pointed toward a human being cost the life early today of Mrs. Helen Koski, 45, of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation settlement at Coverdale. She died in St. Joseph's Hospital from a bullet wound in the left breast.

Paul L. Smith, coal and iron policeman, from whose revolver the shot was fired in the Koski home, is under arrest and county detectives are searching for a Russian, identified only as "The Stranger," who volunteered to show Smith how to make the revolver shoot.

The stranger raised the weapon and pulled the trigger as Mrs. Koski stepped into a doorway, and although it had misfired half a dozen times before, it worked with a human target, and Mrs. Koski collapsed.

County Detectives Robert Geisler and Robert L. McMillen questioned the woman's husband and several boarders who witnessed the shooting and then placed Smith under arrest. The Russian disappeared.

Auto License No. 10 Mystifies Police

Wilkinsburg police believe someone has counterfeited Pennsylvania automobile license plates number "10," which are registered in the name of the wife of Attorney General Thomas J. Baldridge.

The attorney general telephoned the Wilkinsburg authorities this morning that Mrs. Baldridge's machine which Wilkinsburg police reported had passed a red light "stop" signal, was locked in its home garage when the traffic violation is said to have occurred. He also declared that the alleged violation is at least the third registered against license number "10" and that in each instance Mrs. Baldridge's machine could not possibly have been involved. Both the Wilkinsburg police and State Highway Department officials will investigate.

LEVINE QUITS YEAR'S FLYING

VIENNA, Sept. 24.—Instead of being downcast over the idea of being forced to come down here after starting on his long-delayed non-stop flight for India, Charles A. Levine expressed his pleasure at again visiting the city where he and Clarence Chamberlin were feted a few months ago.

Propeller trouble forced Levine and Capt. Hinchcliffe to come down here at 6 o'clock last night after 10 hours of flight from London.

Levine announced that he has given up aviation for this year and that he would take a train for Venice to see the Schneider cup races and recuperate from the strain of his sojourns in London and Paris.

BURGETTSTOWN ROAD RELOCATION ASKED

Attorney Horace Thomas, on behalf of 35 residents of Findley township, presented a petition in Quarter Sessions Court asking for the relocation of a road that is found difficult to maintain, extending from Clinton and Imperial to Burgettstown. The road is in a swampy section. Judge James R. Macfarlane named E. E. Smith, W. M. McJunkin and F. S. Haller as a board of viewers to consider the matter.

John Nye Visits Roadhouse And Offers Sally a Job As His Stenographer

cheeks. "But you know that isn't the truth! You know you telephoned him yourself the other night and asked him to take you for a drive. It's you who's been doing the chasing lately."

Millie flushed even more deeply. "Oh, he's just peeved at me because Davy Davidson came up into the office to see me a few times," she answered, sulkily, swinging her bare little feet over the side of the bed.

"Go on downstairs, Sally, and ask him to stay for supper," she said to her sister. "Set a table for him and me in the little dining room!"

When Sally went downstairs John Nye was standing in the little reception room, looking at Aunt Emily's collection of Toby jugs and Bristol glass.

"Beautiful old stuff," he remarked as he turned away from it. "I like to see you here in this old house. You belong here—not in an office."

If lightning had struck Sally she could not have been more speechless than she was for fully five minutes after he had said that.

With a dazed little smile she left him standing alone in the room, where the fragrance of the lilacs outside made the air sweet, and the leafy trees made green gloom.

A minute or two later, as she passed the door with a big tray in her hands, she saw him still standing there, looking down into the green garden. He was so deep in thought that he did not even look up at her.

Presently he came to the door of the room where she was setting a little table. "Well, I must be off," he said. He was holding out his right hand and he had his hat in the other.

"Oh, no!" she cried. "I forgot. Millie told me I was to ask you to stay to supper. Please do. I want to show you how well I can cook. After those terrible drug store sandwiches that I used to bring you, I think I owe you something decent to eat."

His face was serious. "I never enjoyed anything more than those sandwiches," he said quietly. "It was those sandwiches—and all the other nice things that you did for me—that brought me here today. You made my work a lot easier downtown than it ever was before, or than it has been since. I miss you."

Again came that foolish impulse of Sally's to cry. She struggled with it, but she could feel the warm tears in the back of her throat and in her eyes.

"Hey, you, Sally!" called a loud voice in the outer room, and she gave a start.

It was Ted Sloan's voice, and suddenly she remembered that he had been threatening all week to come out for Sunday night supper.

In an instant he was at the door, and she was herself again, holding out her hand in welcome and smiling her swift, bright smile.

"Hello, Ted!" she cried warmly. But Ted did not answer her or touch the hand she held out to him.

A look of jealousy and distrust flashed into his eyes as he looked from her to John Nye, together there in the seclusion of the little private dining room, not 18 inches apart from each other.

"Hul-LO, Nye!" he said without a smile. And then he leaned towards Sally, and without warning, kissed her upon the mouth.

"Hello, Babe!" he said to her, but his gaze never left John Nye's face.

"See, that's how things are between us!" was what that steady gaze seemed to say, more plainly than any words could have said them.

Sick with anger and shame, Sally stood looking at him.

There was nothing she could do or say. . . . She couldn't cry out to John Nye, and tell him that she didn't care a snap of her fingers for Ted Sloan, and that she hated him to kiss her—that he never had kissed her with her unspoken or spoken consent in all her life.

"After all, he probably doesn't care whether Ted kisses me or not. It's nothing to him," she said to herself, when she could begin to think clearly again.

All the same she hated to have him think that the exchange of kisses between herself and Ted Sloan was a habit of theirs.

"Well, so here you are!" Millie's gay voice came from the outer room and her blond head shot around the door. "What are you all doing in here? Hello, Johnny, going to stay for supper?"

She came swaying into the room, all slenderness and curves, all perfume and color, all warmth and radiance and lure.

She walked straight up to John Nye, and stood just as close to him as she could, looking straight up into his eyes. It was a trick that she had learned from watching Greta Garbo on the screen, and Sally had seen her practice it in her own room dozens of times.

But John Nye was utterly indifferent to it and to her. His dark eyes were quite cold as he looked down at her.

"No, I can't stay tonight, Millie," he said, "I'm sorry."

He went.

Millie followed him as far as the brown car, and stood there talking to him for a minute or two. But he started the motor running as if he were in a hurry to be off, and after a bit Sally saw him raise his hat and wave. Then Millie came slowly up the steps and into the house.

"The big High-Hat!" she snapped, when she was inside the hall and closing the heavy oak door behind her. "Sore at me, I suppose, because I went out a couple of times with Davy Davidson!"

She came close to Sally, who was standing in the doorway of the dining room.

"When your Boy Friend's gone, I want to ask your advice about something," she said in a low tone, and went upstairs to go back to bed. She usually rested all day Sunday.

It was Ted Sloan who put the brilliant idea into Sally's head.

Sally had been telling him how poor business was in the House by the Side of the Road, and he himself had seen how few people came there that Sunday night.

"Your place lacks pep," said Ted, who knew some of the rules of selling, picked up in his own business of selling automobiles. "Now, you take this place down the road, the Lark, as they call it—"

"Don't talk to me about that roadhouse!" groaned Sally. "They have a thousand dollars to spend where Aunt Em and I haven't a thousand pennies! They hired a couple of professional dancers lately, for instance. A couple of Spaniards who know the tango and the—"

"That's just what I'm driving at!" interrupted Ted. "All kidding aside, Sally, you're the best dancer I ever saw! If you'd do some exhibition dancing here, you'd draw the crowds. Not at first, but pretty soon people would hear about you. . . . Put on a sort of one-act show! That's the idea! And you could do it, all alone, and it wouldn't cost you a penny."

He was going, and Sally walked beside him out to where his car stood in the darkness of the driveway.

"Don't talk like a simp, Ted!" she said sharply. "You know I'm not good enough to dance in public."

"Not good enough!" There was a pause while he turned to look intently at her. In the moonlit darkness her skin was like cream satin, her eyes big and shadowy.

"You're beautiful," he said, his voice thick and husky, and suddenly, without warning, he kissed her again. Not the way he had in the afternoon, for John Nye's benefit, but with a certain hard impatience, bending her head back and taking her breath away.

"Now, don't get gay with that Nye gink!" he said when he had let her go. "Because I won't stand for it."

Noel Veritzen Begins to Hover Around Mary Harrison

I FACED a sartorial quandary in my attempt to decide what outfit I should wear for my appointment with Philip Veritzen on the coming Sunday. Knowing his fastidious taste, his caustic criticism of every detail of costume in both his masculine and feminine associates, I did not want to appear at his offices in my ordinary traveling suit. Neither did I wish to wear on the dusty train my best street gown and coat. Even were I willing to risk their soiling, I had a very vivid mental vision of Dicky's lifted eyebrows and his probable thoughts were I to make so radical a departure from my usual habits.

The sight of a pile of clothing which I had just finished mending for Junior and laid upon my bed until I had a chance to rearrange his dresser brought a solution of the problem to my mind. I knew that within a few days I must do some shopping for my small son in the city. Instead of taking a small overnight bag with me, I would take a large suitcase, as is my custom when shopping for him and would stay with Lillian for a day or two. Thus I would have a very plausible excuse for putting in my coat and gown, with slippers and hose to match. My hat fortunately would do for either outfit, and with a thankful remembrance that the Sunday morning train to the city had a chair car, a dressing room and that there would be very few passengers on it, I knew that I could change my outfit on it just before I reached the city.

The luncheon bell put a period to my planning, and with some trepidation as to Dicky's probable behavior toward me, for I had not been deceived by his apparently nonchalant attitude over the wireless message, I went down to the dining-room, finding him already there with his mother, Junior and Katherine, to whom he was talking.

That his role toward me was to be that of the same impersonal friendly courtesy with which he was treating my cousin's wife was at once apparent from his greeting as I came into the room, and I drew a tiny sigh of relief as we sat down to the meal.

"What's the matter with Mary?" her grandmother demanded worriedly as I gave directions to Katie about taking a tray to the young girl's room.

"Nothing to worry over," I assured her. "She simply seemed tired and nervous and I thought a nap and luncheon in her room would be good for her." I looked at Katherine for approval.

"An excellent prescription," the little nurse said, smiling, "especially as she no doubt will be busy talking or listening most of the afternoon."

Mother Graham and I smiled back at her with the pleasure which every mature woman feels in watching a youthful affair of sentiment, but Dicky looked up quickly.

"What's up?" he asked, a bit brusquely.

"Nothing particular," I replied after an instant's useless waiting for the others to answer his query. "It's just that Noel Veritzen appears to find our front veranda a most attractive resting place almost every afternoon."

"Hmmph!" He frowned formidably. "I don't know that I like that. He's not our sort."

Subtly I was aware of the reason for his sudden prejudice against the young violinist, for whom he always had evinced a sincere liking. It was because the boy was the son of Philip Veritzen.

Then, as suddenly, his frown disappeared, and I guessed his returned complacence was due to the remembrance that young Noel Veritzen was estranged from his father and that the elder man's treatment of his only child was outrageous, arousing the resentment of all who knew the circumstances of the quarrel.

"Well, I suppose she might as well play around with him as anyone," he said, and we dropped both Mary and young Veritzen as luncheon topics. But luncheon had been over but an hour when from our seats on the veranda we saw the young violinist come into the yard in the tonneau of the Ticer car with Jerry Ticer proudly driving, and his mother beside him.

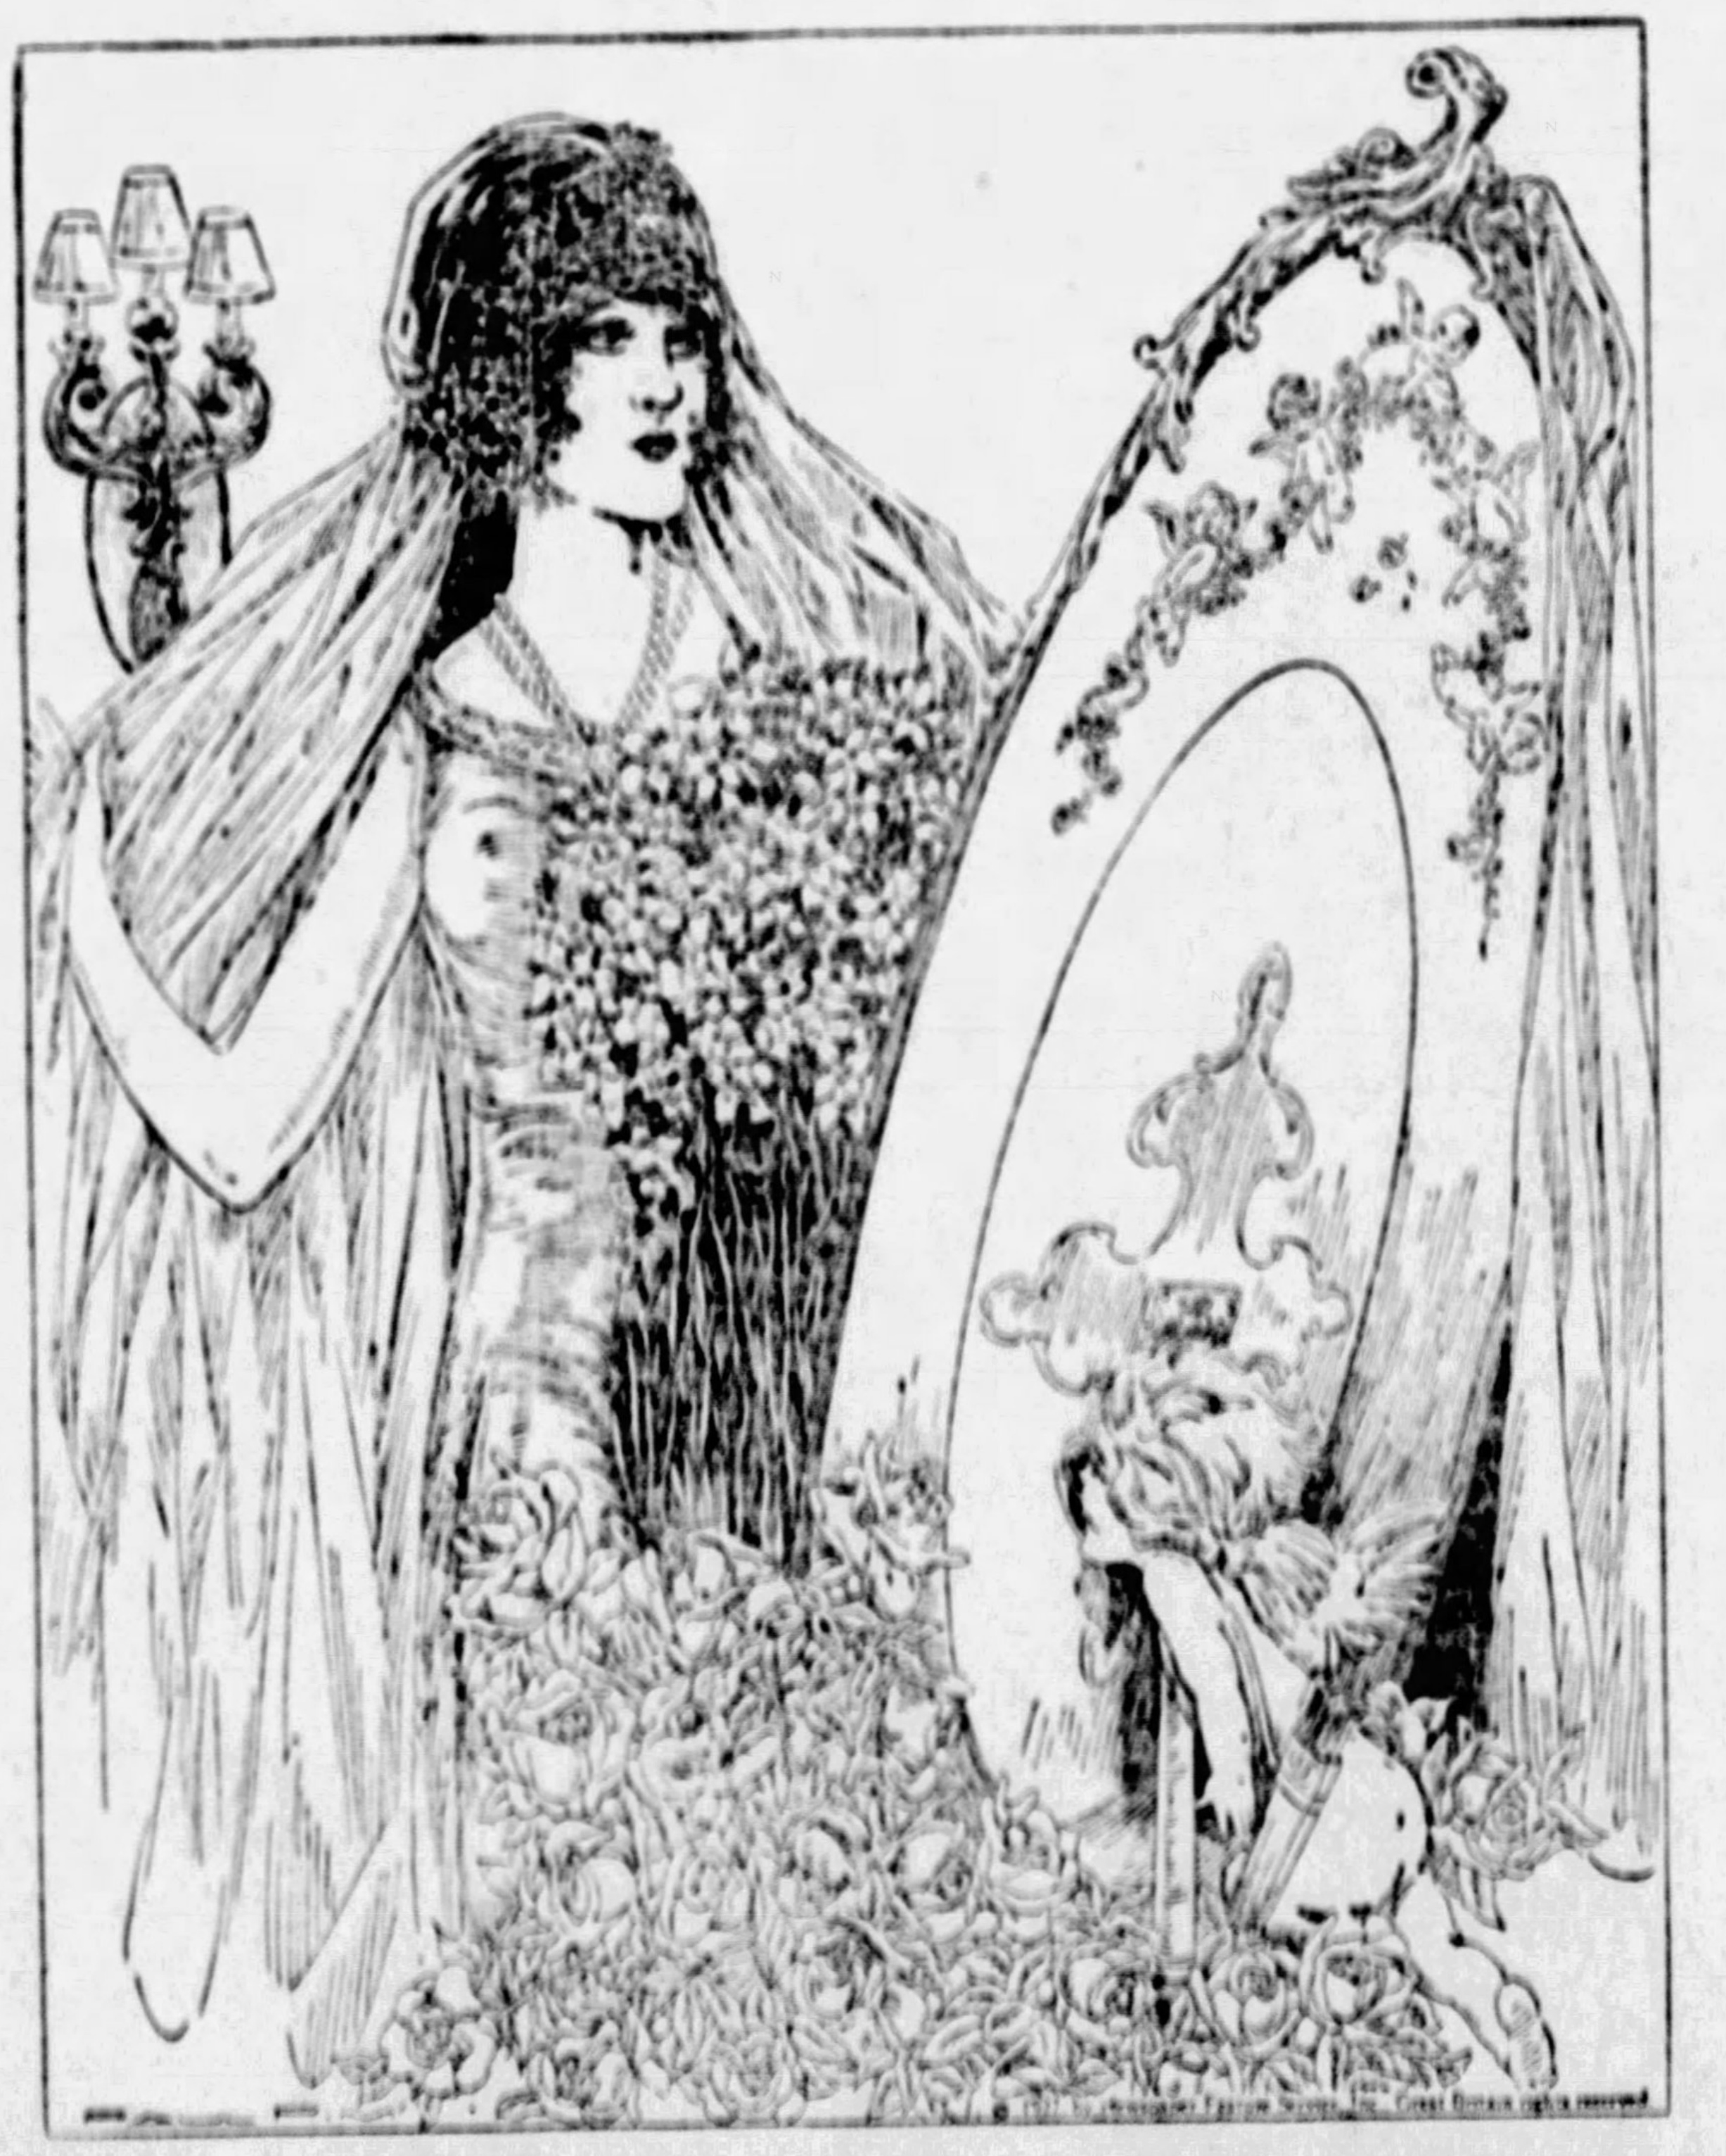
The Final Inspection -:- By Paul Pim



A VISION of loveliness, she stood before her mirror for a final look. Her beautiful ivory satin dress, the lovely lace veil, the gorgeous bouquet, all enhanced the beauty of her radiant countenance. Her heart was aflutter and she was just the least bit anxious that everything look just right.

And she was not alone in her anxiety.

Dan Cupid, also, was making a final inspection. Of course, to him, all brides looked beautiful, but he was especially interested in this Bride. For was he not the instigator of the romance which culminated in this great event? So he peeped from behind the mirror and he was very much satisfied with what he saw.

For the Lovelorn

Troubled

DEAR MISS GALE:

Your advice is wonderful, so that's why I write to you asking your help. I'm a girl 21 years of age. In my home stays a doctor and I learned to love him dearly, for he's wonderful, but he is 43 years old and very jealous of me. I don't go anywhere except once a week to the movies and I have to go with him, otherwise the next day he wouldn't speak to me and humiliate me so much by telling me bad words. Do you think, Miss Gale, I can ever meet anybody else that I can love, because I'm a very quiet girl.

TROUBLED.

My dear girl, I really consider this man a very bad influence for you. He is far too old for you and certainly should not be allowed to dictate to you concerning your pleasures. And his conduct after you have gone out with someone else is most deplorable. He is not nearly so wonderful as you think, or he wouldn't dream of doing such things. Tell your parents or other relatives about him and I am sure the situation will be changed, as it certainly should be.

Friends of "A Decent Fellow"

DEAR MISS GALE:

We have noticed in your column "A Decent Fellow's" letter, in which we find ourselves very interested. We are constant readers, Miss Gale, but have never written to you for advice, because up to this date we have never had heart trouble. Now a few words to "A Decent Fellow." Yes, we are closely related to your question of decency. Decency is our middle name. We never did pet, drink or smoke, the three vital menaces of the jazz world today. Even if you are from Tennessee, we believe the same things as you do. Don't think we are flat tires, because we are lovers of lots of fun. We two girls are considered pretty, as we have been told many, many times. So listen, "A Decent Fellow," we sure agree with you on the question of decency. We would like to meet you personally, but we suppose it is impossible. Thanks, Miss Gale, for your time and space.

FRIENDS OF "A DECENT FELLOW."

I shall make no comment save to say that I am glad you have such high ideals.

Milly

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have read your lovelorn column off and on for almost three years, although this is the first time I am writing to you. "A Decent Fellow's" letter drew my attention. I certainly would like to meet him, for I think fellows such as he are few and hard to find. I am 22 years old. I could have oodles of fellows, but I can't seem to get interested in any of them. I would like to have one steady fellow though. But I am particular, so every fellow would not appeal to me. I do not dance or go in for athletics of any kind, but prefer to putter around the house instead. Housework is my occupation. I enjoy going to the movies or walking with my girl friend. But I would like to go motoring best of all. I would like to have your readers' opinion of me, especially "A Decent Fellow."

MILLY.

"A Decent Fellow" has certainly made many friends in this department.

Forget-Me-Not

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young girl in my early teens. I like a young boy very much, but as yet I have had no opportunity to speak with him. Would you please advise me as to how I am to get this opportunity? Waiting for an early reply.

FORGET-ME-NOT.

Don't you know someone who is acquainted with him and who might arrange a meeting? That is the only way I know, my dear.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

MAN'S "ETERNAL LOVE"

GO TO. What Youth hath not said in his heart, "Would that I could find the Girl of my Dreams! Then would I cease from frivoling, and love her, forever!"

Yea, my Son, couldst thou but find that Paragon amongst women—even a damsel who is both good and interesting; wise and unsophisticated; simple, yet alluring; dazzling—and yet modest!

* * *

HELEN ROWLAND

One at whom all men will turn to stare in admiration and wonder, and who will cause thy vanity to be puffed up—yet who will be content to sit at HOME, and watch thee read the newspaper, six evenings of the week.

* * *

One who will rejoice to stand over a cookstove preparing viands for thy delight—and also adorn thy drawing-room.

One who will be as ice and marble and full of haughtiness toward all other men, yet who will respond to thy kisses, tremble at thy frown, run at thy call, and eat out of thine hand with gratitude.

And, having found this Perfect and Impossible Being, thou wilt love her sufficiently to pet and house and clothe her so long as she never boreth thee, and never interfereth with thy pleasures, nor hangeth about thy neck.

* * *

So long as she feedeth thy vanity—and does not get upon thy nerves nor tread upon thine amour propre.

So long as she keepeth her figure, her slenderness and her girlish complexion.

So long as she causeth thee to flush with pride—and never causeth thee to blush with shame.

So long as she flattereth thee, amuseth thee, coddleth thee, and never expresseth her REAL opinion of thee!

Ah, my Son, come not unto me, sighing for the Perfect Woman and prating of Eternal Love!

For the Perfect Woman is a paradox—and man's Eternal Love is a dream!

But show me a man who is content to find a woman who is cheerful, gentle, kissable and loyal, and who voweth to love her as long as he findeth her lovable, and I shall say unto thee, "Behold, there goeth an honest man!"

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 25

The position of the Sun in the autumn quarter which marks the beginning of the autumn is read as presaging for the United States trouble with Mexico. But this need not be serious.

According to astrology, this is an uncertain day in which it is wise to go to church and to avoid excitement.

Criticism may be prevalent regarding the clergy and the churches and for this reason preachers may be conscious of an unresponsiveness on the part of hearers.

The sway is not favorable to leadership of any sort, for the stars encourage envy and jealousy, while this rule prevails.

Cotton and tin are believed to come under a direction of the stars most profitable to investors.

France and America are to find fault with British diplomacy, according to a London astrologer who reads in the stars new difficulties over shipping.

This same seer predicts that Germany will form powerful alliances with Russia and Turkey, both of which countries are to make big gains in prosperity in the next few months.

The evening of this day may be depressing to all who are inclined to think seriously, for the stars are in aspects that have a tendency to cause despondency.

Lovers should take note that the stars do not smile on romance today, making for caution on the part of suitors.

Under this rule women may be inclined to take the initiative in proposing marriage, a tendency that will increase.

Persons whose birthdate it is may find themselves at a difficult place in their lives. They should be exceedingly careful in making all important decisions.

Children born on this day are supposed to have unusual talents. Many subjects of this sign attain world fame.

Monday, September 26

Good and evil planetary aspects contend today, according to astrologers who find the configuration exceedingly disturbing.

The earlier hours are much more fortunate than later times in the day and business should therefore be transacted with the greatest celerity.

Women have rather a promising sign to guide them and they should be able to succeed in business matters this morning.

Weddings today should be fairly lucky, if the marriage ceremony is performed before noon.

Much love-making may be inspired by this configuration, which is supposed to cause men to be susceptible, but fickle.

The new moon of this date is believed to be promising in that it presages brisk business and increase of commerce.

Speculation may be encouraged by the optimistic sway, but it should be avoided, for the stars foretell many daring projects that mean ruin to investors.

Theaters will prosper and will multiply, it is forecast, and new players will gain fame.

Return of respect for romance, which has been predicted, gives promise of new poetic dramas.

A London astrologer finds the conjunction of the Sun and Mars threatening to the United States as well as to China and Japan.

Trade with South America certainly should increase, if the interpretations of the planetary aspects can be trusted.

Rush of prospectors to Africa and Australia from this country as well as Europe is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a favorable year, but they should avoid flirtations.

Children born on this day probably will have unusual charm and magnetism.

Subjects of this sign often gain fame as artists.

"Am I Engaged?"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"AM I really engaged?" Have you ever asked yourself this question?

Many a girl has, with honest doubt as to whether she has received a proposal.

Of course, in great-grandmother's day, when Jonathan knelt at the feet of his blushing Clarisse and formally begged her to become his wife, Clarisse knew she was being proposed to. Wheater she became engaged depended on her parents' decision.

But we are living in an informal age.

"See that cunning cottage!" modern Claire exclaims as she and Jack whiz past in Jack's roadster.

"Why wouldn't that do for us, Claire?" asks Jack. "Did you notice whether there was a garage?"

"Yes, and a sun-parlor and a darling little flower garden at the side. Let's look at it. There was a sign 'For Sale' in the window."

Jack turns back the car and the two look at the cottage and take the name of the agents for further inquiry. They learn the cottage will be ready for occupancy in three months. "We can be back from our honeymoon by that time," remarks Jack to Claire. So the two become engaged—in this off-hand, casual manner.

Who shall say Claire and Jack are not as truly deeply in love as Jonathan and Clarisse with their set proposal, blushing acceptance and formal betrothal. Yet a proposal, however informal, should be so clear-cut that there can be no chance for a misunderstanding.

As a matter of fact, when a man loves a woman and has decided to marry her if he can win her, he is only too eager to know his fate beyond all question. He will for that reason make his proposal so clear that even though it may be informal, it will leave no room for doubt as to whether an engagement exists, so far as his willingness is concerned.

If you are in doubt as to whether your "understanding" amounts to an engagement, you will be safe in assuming you are not engaged, and acting accordingly.

"Jim said a lot about loving me—but not much about marriage," reflected Madge on her return from her vacation. She and Jim had been guests at the same hotel. They were also co-workers for the same firm in town.

Had Jim been only amusing himself after all, Madge wondered. She could not doubt his sincerity. And yet—

She almost regretted that wonderful good-bye kiss—their first. Madge would not have permitted—and returned—that kiss had she not grown to care for Jim. On her part at least, it was the seal of their love. Yet Jim had not proposed.

Madge is wise to pause and wonder. Yet Jim loves her, and has since their work first threw them together at the office. At the moment she was wondering whether his words of adoration meant serious love and wish to marry her. Jim was in the clouds. He felt gloriously hopeful, thanks to the warm responsiveness of Madge's mood and good-bye kiss. Now he decided he would ask her to be his wife, for he was confident that she cared.

So many girls encourage men to propose just because they enjoy attention and flattery and wish to have it continue. The same girls are likely to brag of the proposals they have received and refused. If urged, this type of girl will cheerfully tell the names of her disappointed lovers. And such news spreads rapidly. A man realizing this propensity to brag on the part of some girls is naturally a little slow and careful about definitely committing himself to a proposal of marriage, which may mean everything to him and merely a conquest to the girl.

On the other hand, if a man goes about with you a year or two or year after year, without proposing, you will be safe in concluding he does not love you and does not mean to propose, regardless of any vague understanding about an engagement. And the sooner you begin with other friends, and encourage other young men, the wiser and happier you will be.

There is another aspect of the engagement problem which may lead a girl to ask herself: "Am I engaged?"

The considerate girl manages a friendship with a man so cleverly that he knows whether he will have a reasonable chance of success in proposing to her. If she likes, but does not love him, she manages to convey this impression to him so sweetly that he is spared the humiliation of a useless proposal, yet their friendship goes right on. A girl should be ashamed of deliberately leading any young man on to propose marriage whom she does not love and wishes to marry.

If you really care for the young man who shows such deep and tender interest in you, and he would be a suitable fiance, you can encourage his friendship and devotion without "throwing yourself at him" or answering the question he has not yet asked.

Your sympathy and response will give him confidence and inspire him to share with you his hopes and dreams and ask you to share his life as his adored wife. Then you will be the happiest girl in the world, for you will know you are engaged to the man you love.

WHAT'S - THE - ANSWER?

1. Who was Joseph of Arimathea?
2. What is gorse?
3. What is the origin of the name of the gooseberry?
4. Of whom was it said "His strength was as the strength of ten, Because his heart was pure?"
5. Who was the first woman painter in America?
6. What part of the human brain does the thinking?
7. What is gossamer?
8. How many strings are there on a violin?
9. Why is the nape of the neck so called?
10. When did the custom of each Pope taking a new name originate?

The answers to these questions may be found in Monday's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. The Pendragons were the supreme chiefs in early England. It is also the family name of the semi-mythical King Arthur and his father.
2. The Land of the Midnight Sun includes Scandinavia, Norway, Lapland, Sweden, Iceland, etc. It was so called by the traveler, du Chaillu, who published a book bearing the title.
3. Old Rowley was Charles II of England, thus nicknamed after his favorite race-horse. There is still a "Rowley Mile" at the Newmarket race-course from the same origin.
4. A lithograph is a drawing or writing on stone, although metal is now used in most cases.
5. Lammas-Day ("loaf-mass-day") is August 1. It means the day of first-fruit offerings, when a loaf was given to the priests in lieu of the first fruits.
6. Yeast is composed of many millions of tiny one-celled living plants. When yeast grows the cells multiply by division, each dividing into two new cells.
7. The rose is the national flower of England.
8. The "Know-Nothings" is another name for the "American Party," which arose in the United States in 1853. It proposed to keep foreigners out of office and to make them wait longer before becoming citizens. Members organized in secret lodges, and to all questions about it answered "I don't know," whence came the nickname of "Know-Nothings."
9. The Man in the Iron Mask was a person imprisoned in the fortress of the Isle Ste. Marguerite, in the Mediterranean in 1662. He died in the Bastille in 1703. He is said to have been an older illegitimate brother of Louis XIV, or his twin brother, imprisoned for reasons of state.
10. The Latin phrase "In vino veritas" means "there is truth in wine," because of the fact that an intoxicated man is off his guard, and likely to speak the truth.

"BE YOURSELF!" THE GREAT, IN CHARACTER AND CAREER, DO NOT IMITATE.

Drawn By NELL BRINKLEY

DON'T TRY TO BE THIS TYPE OF GIRL— IF YOU ARE REALLY THIS ONE.

YOUTH—especially the girl branch of it—is having a hard time of it this year of our Lord trying to be itself, and yet stay happy about it. It says flippantly, "be yourself," and then is afraid to do just that. Half the poor little girl-world is hitting it up over and beyond a very liberal speed-limit and the other half is really a slow-mouse, and enjoys being one better than a swift one, BUT—is afraid of what will be thought of it by some one or another if it doesn't get on the merry-go-round! It has a very severe case of inferiority complex—a complaint that half the girl-world suffered from long before that phrase was invented.

Don't try to be the girl on the left—prettily impertinent, reckless, careless of speech and habits, "a good sport," a speedy little chassis driven by a high-powered and hysterical motor, if you are a very different kind of girl from that; just because you are afraid someone will call you a "stick!"

And also, if it should be that the company of the witty and worldly-wise, the glitter of parties and their noise and jazz isn't much in your young life—and the boys may believe it or not, there are a great many girls of whom this is true—if you would lots rather be home with a book, a cup of tea, flowers at an open window, and the company of one understanding boy, even if he is far short of dollars and beauty, has a better head than a nose, and owns a second-hand Dodger that he bought himself instead of a Swank-hard-Breezer that belongs to his father, than go to the spiffiest party you know of—and the boys may believe it or not, but there are shoals of girls of whom this is true—; why, then do it.

Don't let anyone scare you out of doing what you think is the right and happy thing for YOURSELF to do, by shaking that word "stick" at you! —NELL BRINKLEY.

Milady Beautiful

By LOIS LEEDS

Beauty Questions Answered

DEAR MISS LEEDS—(1) Could you tell me some way to have nice, rounded hips? Mine are bony and not big enough in proportion to the rest of my figure. My bust is also not as well developed as it should be. I have heard of exercises for the bust, but I have not much time to do them. Is there not some other way? (2) What will make my hair grow faster? My hair is very oily. (3) Do you advise the use of mascara to darken lashes? I use vaseline on mine but it does not work very fast.

APPRECIATED.

Answer—(1) Your trouble is evidently underweight. Find out what is the average weight for girls of your age and height and try to gain up to that point. My leaflet on "How to Gain Weight" explains diet and exercises that will be helpful to you. Besides eating the right foods and taking moderate exercise to stimulate your circulation, you should cultivate a placid disposition. Many women keep themselves thin by nervousness and worry. You must also have sufficient sleep each night. There is no magic formula by which one may develop a skinny figure into a well-proportioned one, but one must work in nature's way towards physical perfection. (2) The slow rate of growth of your hair is probably due to your underweight and general lack of physical fitness. Excessive oiliness of the scalp may also be traced to the same underlying cause. Build up radiant health, my dear, and most of your beauty problems will solve themselves. Massage your scalp for at least 10 minutes a day. You may use the following tonic on your scalp twice a week before the massage: 1 ounce bay rum, 2 grams quinine sulphate, 15 drops tincture of capsicum, 1 dram tincture cantharides, 1 ounce cologne water, 1 ounce distilled water. (3) I do not recommend the daily use of mascara because it is almost sure to get into the eyes now and then and inflame them. When it is used it should be removed thoroughly at bedtime with vaseline. It is a better plan to darken your lashes slowly by using olive oil or vaseline on them every day; this will not, of course, make them a dark brown if they are naturally pale but it will gradually make them darker than they were originally.

LOIS LEEDS.

Dear Miss Leeds—(1) Please recommend a good astringent for the face. Would bathing alcohol be good for that purpose? (2) I also have pimples and blackheads on my shoulders. I bathe carefully always and rub my shoulders very hard with a towel to start the circulation. The pimples are worse in summer than winter.

REGULAR READER.

Answer—(1) Here is an excellent recipe that many of my readers have found helpful for refining the skin and reducing excessive oiliness: ½ pint rosewater, 1 teaspoon borate of soda, 20 drops tincture of quillaya, 20 drops of essence of lavender, 1 teaspoonful tincture of benzoin. If you wish to use the alcohol dilute it with equal parts of rosewater. (2) It sometimes takes a long time to cure acne such as you appear to have. If you have had this trouble for several years and it has not improved under home treatment you should consult a skin specialist about it. Revise your diet, if necessary, to include more fresh fruits and succulent vegetables. Avoid heavy, rich or fried foods, pastries and sweets. My leaflet on "Complexion Ills" gives a local treatment that may help you. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envepole for it.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Overeating Is a Sure Short Cut to the Cemetery

IN A recent number of "London Life" were some pertinent comments on death certificates. The writer says they don't record the truth. When they do some of them will read like this:

DR COPELAND

"Died after 30 years of overeating."

"Killed by high living."

"Smothered to death; worked and slept in unventilated rooms."

I agree with "Life." A large percentage of death certificates dodge the truth. The family would never call the doctor again if he bluntly stated the fact.

"Speak well of the dead," is an old maxim. It should be followed, of course, but this need not prevent us from philosophizing on some of the all too common mistakes of mankind.

Many times I'm sorry I am a doctor. It is hard to keep from volunteering a lot of unwelcome advice to my friends. I see them overeating, "living high" in every sense, and violating all the rules of personal hygiene. It makes me feel like shouting at them in disapproval.

In similar spirit, I assume, they look at me and hesitate to condemn my shortcomings. It is a strange world, isn't it?

But who can deny that many men and many women, too, are cut off in their prime by high living? Overeating is the most prevalent of physical evils. Lack of fresh air during some period of the day, is the almost constant experience of the majority of the human family.

The average person is an optimist. He may do a lot of growling, but in his heart of hearts he expects to "get away" with everything he undertakes.

If he became really convinced that the daily practice of heavy eating is going to shorten his life materially, he would modify his habits. But he really expects, somehow or other, to escape the usual penalty.

What silly asses we are! Isn't it a fact?

Why in the name of common sense do we act this way? Why do you expect your heart and kidneys and liver will submit to treatment which killed your father, your grandfather, some other member of your family, or perhaps all of them?

Why do you think you have a ticket of immunity? It is absurd!

And yet that is what you really believe. In some mysterious manner you are to step past the Death Angel and dodge him for a score of years!

Let me whisper in your ear! He has his eye on you right now!

Wipe the smile off the face of expectant Death, by practicing temperance in your manner of living. You can add years to your expectancy when you are ready to sacrifice appetite.

Ritzy Rosey

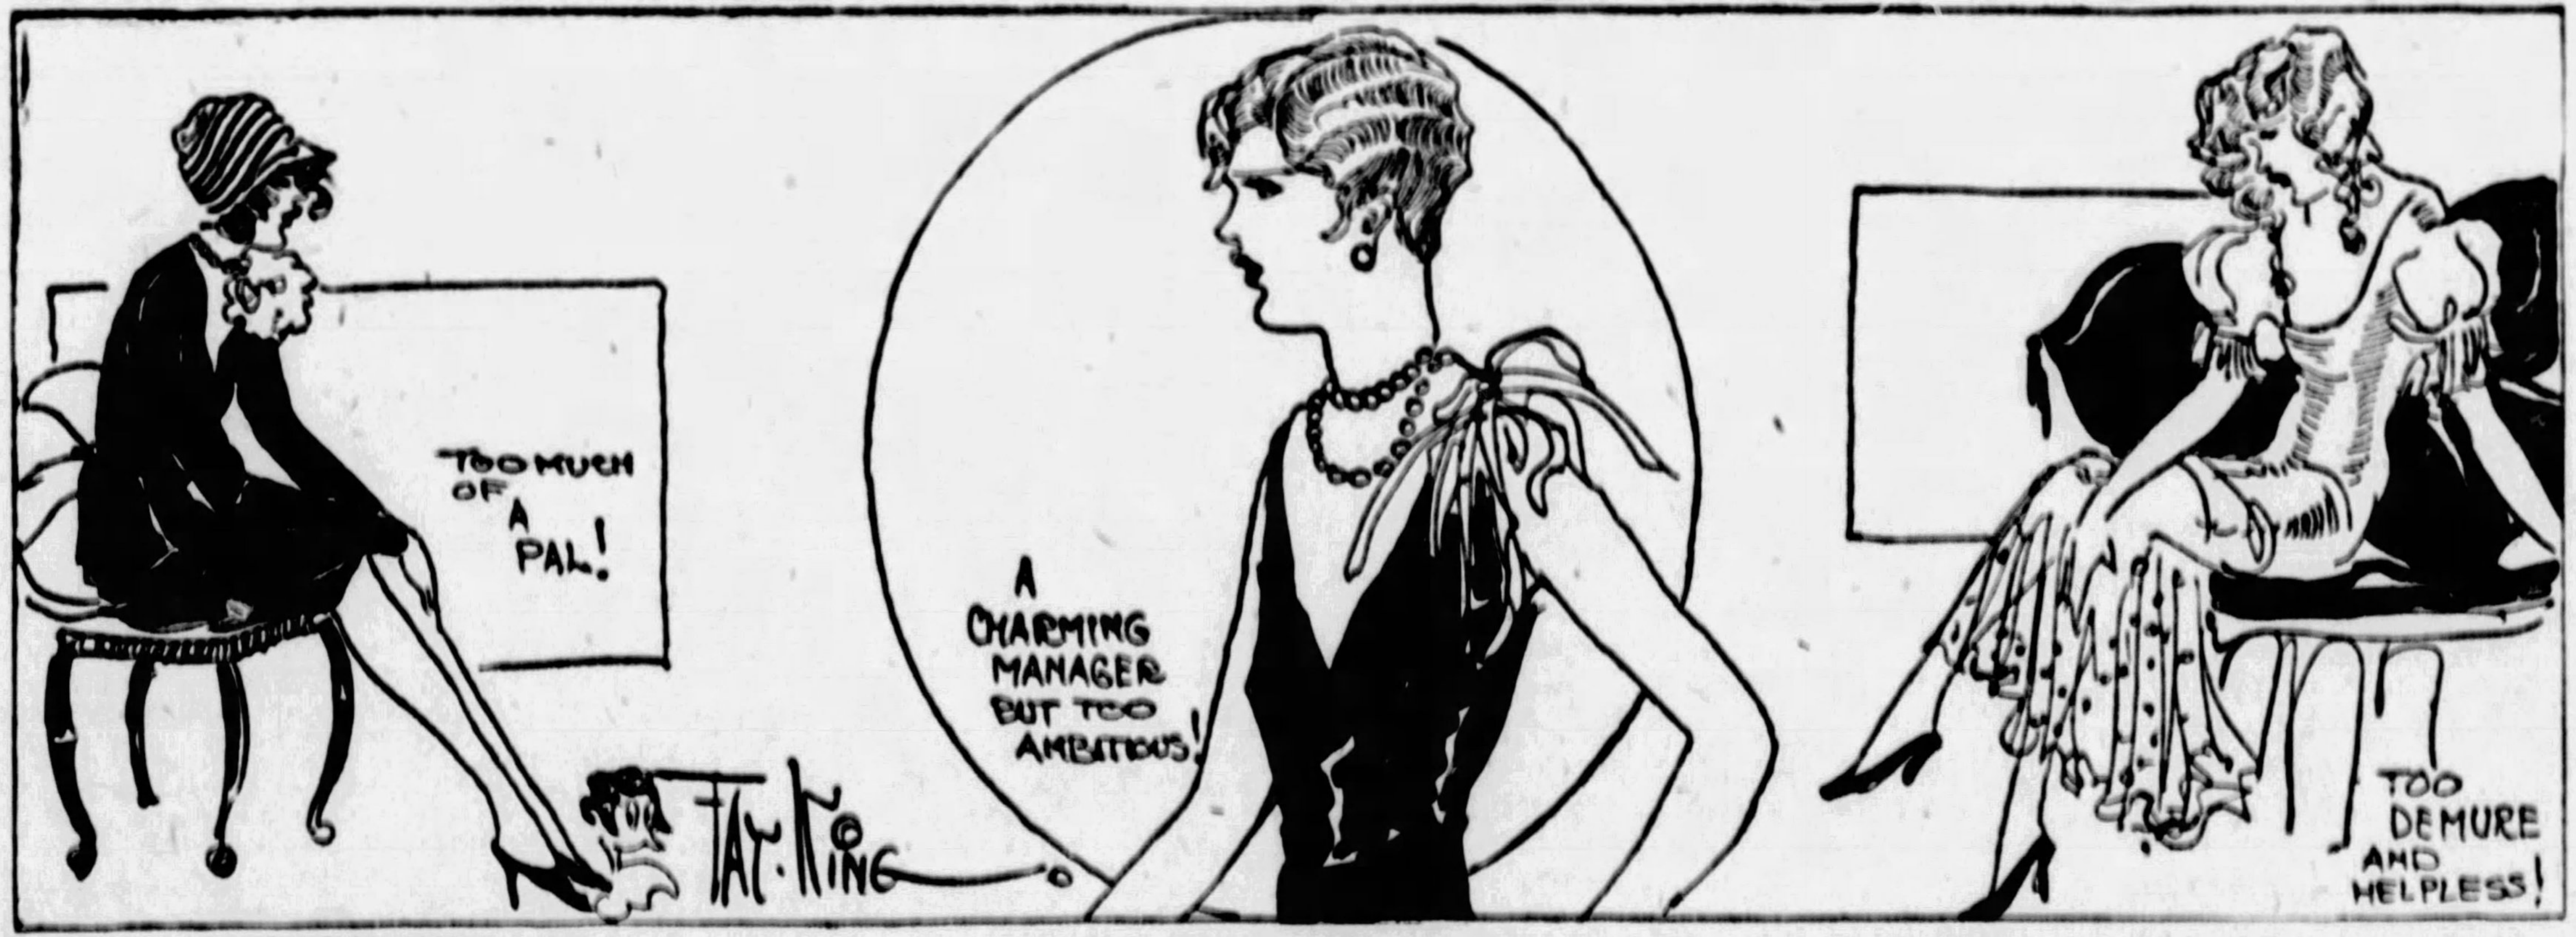
TO BE really fashionable it seems to be necessary to have shoes of the same material as the coat worn above them, or at least the same as the coat trimming. So Ritzy Rosey and Penelope are wearing tweed and calfskin foot coverings, respectively. However, if one has a No. 8 foot one doesn't wear calfskin shoes. The hair-covered leather seems to add a couple of sizes.

Modern Marriages Decried by Fay King as Bad



TOO MUCH OF A PAL!
A CHARMING MANAGER BUT TOO AMBITIOUS!
TOO DEMURE AND HELPLESS!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

IN THINKING over a number of wives among my various acquaintances of years, I am inclined to dispute the fact that any but the good old-fashioned wife who lives for her home and children is a real success!

One wife I know tried the modern plan of being a broad-minded pal to her husband. They were to have their own friends, not to see too much of each other. They were to have freedom with marriage and follow their careers.

A smash was bound to come, and it did.

Another wife I have in mind made marriage her career. But she was so ambitious for her husband's success that she was nothing more than an efficiency expert. Their social life was managed by her with maddening detail and deliberation.

She cultivated only the people who could help her husband. She vamped influential men for his promotion. She wouldn't consider the responsibility of raising a family, as it would interfere with her ambitions for him.

Every dollar was spent on making an impression upon the proper people. It was only a matter of time when this marriage busted.

Another wife I have in mind was delicately feminine, indeed, and her line was listless and helpless. I have seen her husband wait on her hand and foot as if he had been a slave and she was an Oriental princess.

But after a time he grew tired of delicatessen meals and dusty furniture and the last I heard they had busted up, too.

I have observed that the marriages that last are those in which a wife does her part as a homemaker—much as old-fashioned wives have done for ages!

These "modern marriages" don't last long.

Mrs. James Edward Lewis Will Honor Daughter at Longue Vue Luncheon

MRS. JAMES EDWARD LEWIS, of Aylesboro avenue, has chosen Wednesday, December 28, as the date for a luncheon to be given in the Longue Vue Country Club in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Mary Currier Lewis. Miss Lewis will be introduced at a tea to be given by her mother in her home Wednesday afternoon, November 16. Mrs. Lewis and her family returned last week from Cape May, where they had a house for the summer. Her sons, Jack Currier Lewis and James Edward Lewis, Jr., have returned to Yale and the Hill School respectively.

Another debut date set is November 5, taken by Mrs. Claude F. Pugh, of Hamilton road, Thornburg, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Woodward Scott Shaw, of the Iroquois apartments, for a tea to be given in the Twentieth Century Club to present Mrs. Pugh's daughter, Miss Anne Virginia Pugh. Miss Pugh is a senior at Wellesley College.

STOPPING AT SEASHORE

Mrs. Oscar Bieler, South Pacific avenue, who spent the summer in the West, is now in Atlantic City.

The opening day of the Westmoreland Hunt horse show at Greensburg yesterday brought a number of Pittsburghers, with an even larger crowd expected today. The cool weather necessitated the hiding of many attractive sports costumes under heavy coats, many of them fur. Mrs. H. C. Bughman wore a mink coat over her gray ensemble, while Mrs. John Ormsby Burgwin appeared in a leopard skin coat. Mrs. Simon Patterson entered her hunter, Dunlow, in the show, riding him herself. Among local persons noted were Mrs. Frederick Hubard, who wore a heavy sports coat with a black fox fur; Mrs. Charles A. Painter in a blue outfit; Miss Josephine T. O'Neill, in a knit jersey frock with matching hat; Mrs. George H. Calvert, who was also an exhibitor; Mrs. Gordon King, in a tweed suit; Mrs. Charles [illegible], wearing an all white costume; Mrs. Durwin Donnelly, Mrs. Frederic Byers and Mrs. H. L. Patton.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Malcolm Hawley, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, have made known the engagement of Mrs. Hawley's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Swift Ogden, to Clark Miller, son of Judge J. J. Miller and the late Mrs. Miller, of Pittsburgh. The wedding will take place next spring. Miss Ogden attended the Springside School, Chestnut Hill, and made her debut in Philadelphia several seasons ago. Mr. Miller was graduated from Princeton in 1918 and from the University of Pittsburgh Law School in 1921. He served as an ensign in the Navy during the war, and is a member of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, Fox Chapel Club and the Princeton Club.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Patterson Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Henderson of Edgewood, and Roy C. Fullerton, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Fullerton of Sterling, Kan., was solemnized Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the Wilkinsburg Covenanter Church by the Rev. J. B. Willson, assisted by the Rev. R. J. G. McKnight. The bride wore a gown of monkey-skin crepe Elizabeth over pink pussy-willow taffeta, and carried Ophelia roses. Miss Dorothea Henderson was her sister's maid of honor, appearing in powder blue crepe and carrying butterfly roses and delphinium. Frank Latham was best man and the ushers included Wallace H. Henderson and Robert F. Henderson, brothers of the bride; Thomas Clark and William Hazlett of Wilkinsburg. The wedding music was played by Miss Katheryn Wilson, violinist, and Mrs. Elizabeth Copley, pianist. A reception for 50 followed the ceremony in the Henderson home. After an eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Fullerton will be at home in New Alexandria, Pa. Among the out-of-town guests were James Crawford of Charleston, W. Va., Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Henderson of Mansfield, O.; Mrs. J. B. Lytle, Miss Ethel Lytle and Miss Agnes Lytle of Beaver Falls.

WOMAN'S CLUB OPENS ITS FALL SEASON WITH TEA

The Woman's City Club formally opened its doors for a new season yesterday afternoon when a tea was given in honor of Miss Mary Shaw, the actress, who is playing here this week. Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, president of the City Club, and Miss Shaw received together and tea was poured by Mrs. Norwood Johnston and Mrs. Pitt Osborne Heasley. There were lovely decorations, dahlias on the piano, zinnias on the window sills and cosmos everywhere with an especially attractive centerpiece on the tea table.

Miss Shaw's informal talk was thoroughly enjoyed. In it she pointed out the debt women owe to the theater for taking them out of themselves. "Actresses are seldom sick and never die," Miss Shaw quoted, explaining that this is because they forget self and live their roles. Just as she had done the day before at the Congress of Clubs, Miss Shaw stressed women's responsibility for the theater, in that they make up so large a percentage of the audiences and are better advertisers of plays than men. She told also of the Woman's Theater, the dream of the actresses, which is to be realized within the next few years.

Mrs. Samuel Pickering and a special committee, together with Mrs. Samuel Black McCormick and her hospitality committee, arranged the tea.

Westmoreland Hunt Attracts Society

GREENSBURG, Sept. 24.—The elite of the equestrian world held forth here yesterday and today to the audible admiration of Western Pennsylvania society folk, who turned out en masse for the annual Westmoreland Hunt show, the biggest classic of the fall season. Thoroughbreds of all ages and breeds, most of them hunters, a few gaited saddle horses, ponies, road hacks and women's and children's mounts were put through their paces in close competition for coveted awards of ribbons and trophies. The show closes tonight with the awarding of championships for the best saddle horse and the outstanding hunter.

Yesterday's events brought out the finest array of colts ever seen in this part of the country. Beginning with foals at side, the entries included 2-year-olds, 3-year-olds, lightweights, middleweights and heavyweights. There were also a number of fine specimens in the breeding classes.

Competition for the challenge cup in the open hunters' class was particularly keen. There were more than 30 entries in this event, including winners of the trophy for 1924, '25 and '26.

Charles F. Colbert of Sharpsburg owned both the '24 and '25 winners, "Howdy Boy" and "Silverthreads," and R. K. Mellon exhibited "Highwayman," last year's winner.

"Brompton," a chestnut gelding owned by Herbert A. May, was awarded the cup this year. "Brompton" is 16.1 hands and is 7 years old. He is a handsome beast and his performance yesterday made him worthy of the honors bestowed upon him by the judges. The cup, which was presented by Mrs. Murray A. Cobb, must be won three times by the same owner to be held permanently.

The judges of the hunters were Redmond C. Stewart of Baltimore and Thomas J. Macabe of Toronto, Canada, declared to be two of the foremost horsemen on the continent. Lodge Bowles of Millwood, Va., and Henry Cullins of Devon, Pa., are judging the saddle classes.

FISHER TALKS OF 1928; VISITS COOLIDGE

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Pennsylvania, always a potent factor in Republican politics, is undecided as yet in its choice of a presidential candidate, according to Gov. John S. Fisher, who called upon President Coolidge at the White House yesterday.

Although sentiment has failed to crystalize for any one man, Fisher said there were several strong "favorite son" candidates of other states in the running who might attract the support of the Keystone State, including Hoover, Hughes, Dawes and Lowden.

The Governor expressed the opinion that President Coolidge, when he issued his famous "I do not choose" statement, intended to eliminate himself definitely from the race and desired to stop all efforts in his behalf. The way is still open to his nomination, however, he added.

Gov. Fisher invited the President to visit the sesquicentennial celebration at York, Pa., when he goes to Pittsburgh on October 13 to participate in the observance of Founders' Day at Carnegie Institute.

DECEMBER-MAY MARRIAGE REACHES DIVORCE COURT

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—Suit for divorce against Frank Keenan, actor and playwright, has been filed by Margaret White Keenan. She accuses the actor of cruelty and says he once remained intoxicated for sixteen days. When they were married, June 30, 1924, at Honolulu, Mrs. Keenan said, her husband was 66 and she was 23. She said he promised to give her half his property and she abandoned her profession as musician to marry him.

WAYNE B. WHEELER LEAVES $50.000 ESTATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Wayne B. Wheeler, late general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, who died September 5, left an estate of $50,000, it was revealed when letters of administration were asked in District of Columbia Probate Court. At the time of his death, Wheeler was receiving a salary of $7,500 per year. Three sons, Robert Wayne, Donald and Joseph Canby Wheeler, are the sole heirs.

VALENTINO'S PISTOLS IN "SHE'S A SHEIK" FILM

Two of Rudolph Valentino's most prized possessions, a brace of superb Arab pistols which he used in "The Sheik," are being utilized as props now by Bebe Daniels, film star, in her new desert comedy, "She's a Sheik." Miss Daniels bought the pistols, along with other Valentino treasures, by devoting two and a half days to the auction sale which disposed of the idol's effects after his death.

EVERY THIRD FIRE DEATH OCCURS IN RURAL AERA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—One-third of deaths by fire occur in rural districts and $150,000,000 of farm property was destroyed by fire last year, the National Fire Waste Council reported at its semi-annual meeting. During the coming year the council will direct a major part of its work toward trying to reduce farm fire losses.

WOMAN FALLS OR LEAPS 15 STORIES TO HER DEATH

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Alice Ardis, 28, fell or jumped fifteen stories to her death from a fashionable Fifth avenue apartment house. Police learned that she had been ill for several months. When found in a courtyard, the woman was clad only in a nightgown and negligee.

MANY DRIVEN OUT AS BLAST FIRES BUILDING

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—A score of persons were driven out of a three-story apartment building here when an explosion in an adjoining garage sent spouts of gasoline upon it. The explosion caused a fire, extinguished after an estimated damage of $25,000 was done. The cause of the blast was unknown.

OFFICIAL MISCELLANEOUS.

THE construction of a cofferdam to inclose the beartrap and fixed weir for Dam No. 52, Ohio River, will be commenced on or about Sept. 26, 1927. The cofferdam to be constructed is an extension of the present lock and Chanoine Weir cofferdam and will extend to the Kentucky shore. The height of the cofferdam will be about 18 feet above low water. Navigation should proceed in the channel between the river wall of the lock and the present cofferdam, both of which will be marked at night by red lights. Navigation interests will be advised when that part of the cofferdam between the lock and Pier No. 1 is entirely removed and the area swept. The red light now displayed on the end of the cofferdam or buoy marking the limit of channel farthest away from the lock will be moved to Pier No. 1. It may not be practicable, on account of the sand drift, always to display lights as described above, consequently pilots should familiarize themselves with the exact location of the cofferdam and navigable channel. Blueprints of the cofferdam may be seen in the U. S. Engineer Offices at Pittsburgh, Huntington, Cincinnati and Louisville, and at Locks and Dams Nos. 41, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52 and 53, Ohio River. U. S. Engineer Office, P. O. Box 72, Louisville, Ky.

U. S. ENGINEER OFFICE,
P. O. Box 72, Louisville, Ky.
Sealed bids will be received until 2 p. m., Central Time, October 14, 1927, and then publicly opened, for furnishing all labor and materials and performing all work for fabricating and erecting beartrap leaves for Dam 52, Ohio River. Further information on application.

The purchaser will be allowed on the purchase price the reasonable cost for the printing of the bonds not to exceed $100.00, and the reasonable cost of the legal opinion thereon not to exceed $150.00.

All bidders will deposit a certified check for $1,500.00, drawn to the order of the School District of the Borough of McKees Rocks. Checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned. No interest allowed upon the amount of the check of the successful bidder, and such check will be retained and applied as part payment for the bonds or to secure the School District against loss resulting from the failure of the bidder to comply with the terms of the bid.

Proposals should be addressed to A. D. Levy, secretary of the School District of the Borough of McKees Rocks, Pennsylvania, and enclosed in a sealed envelope marked on the outside "Proposal for Bonds."

The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. For further information apply to the Secretary or Solicitor.

A. D. LEVY,
Secretary.

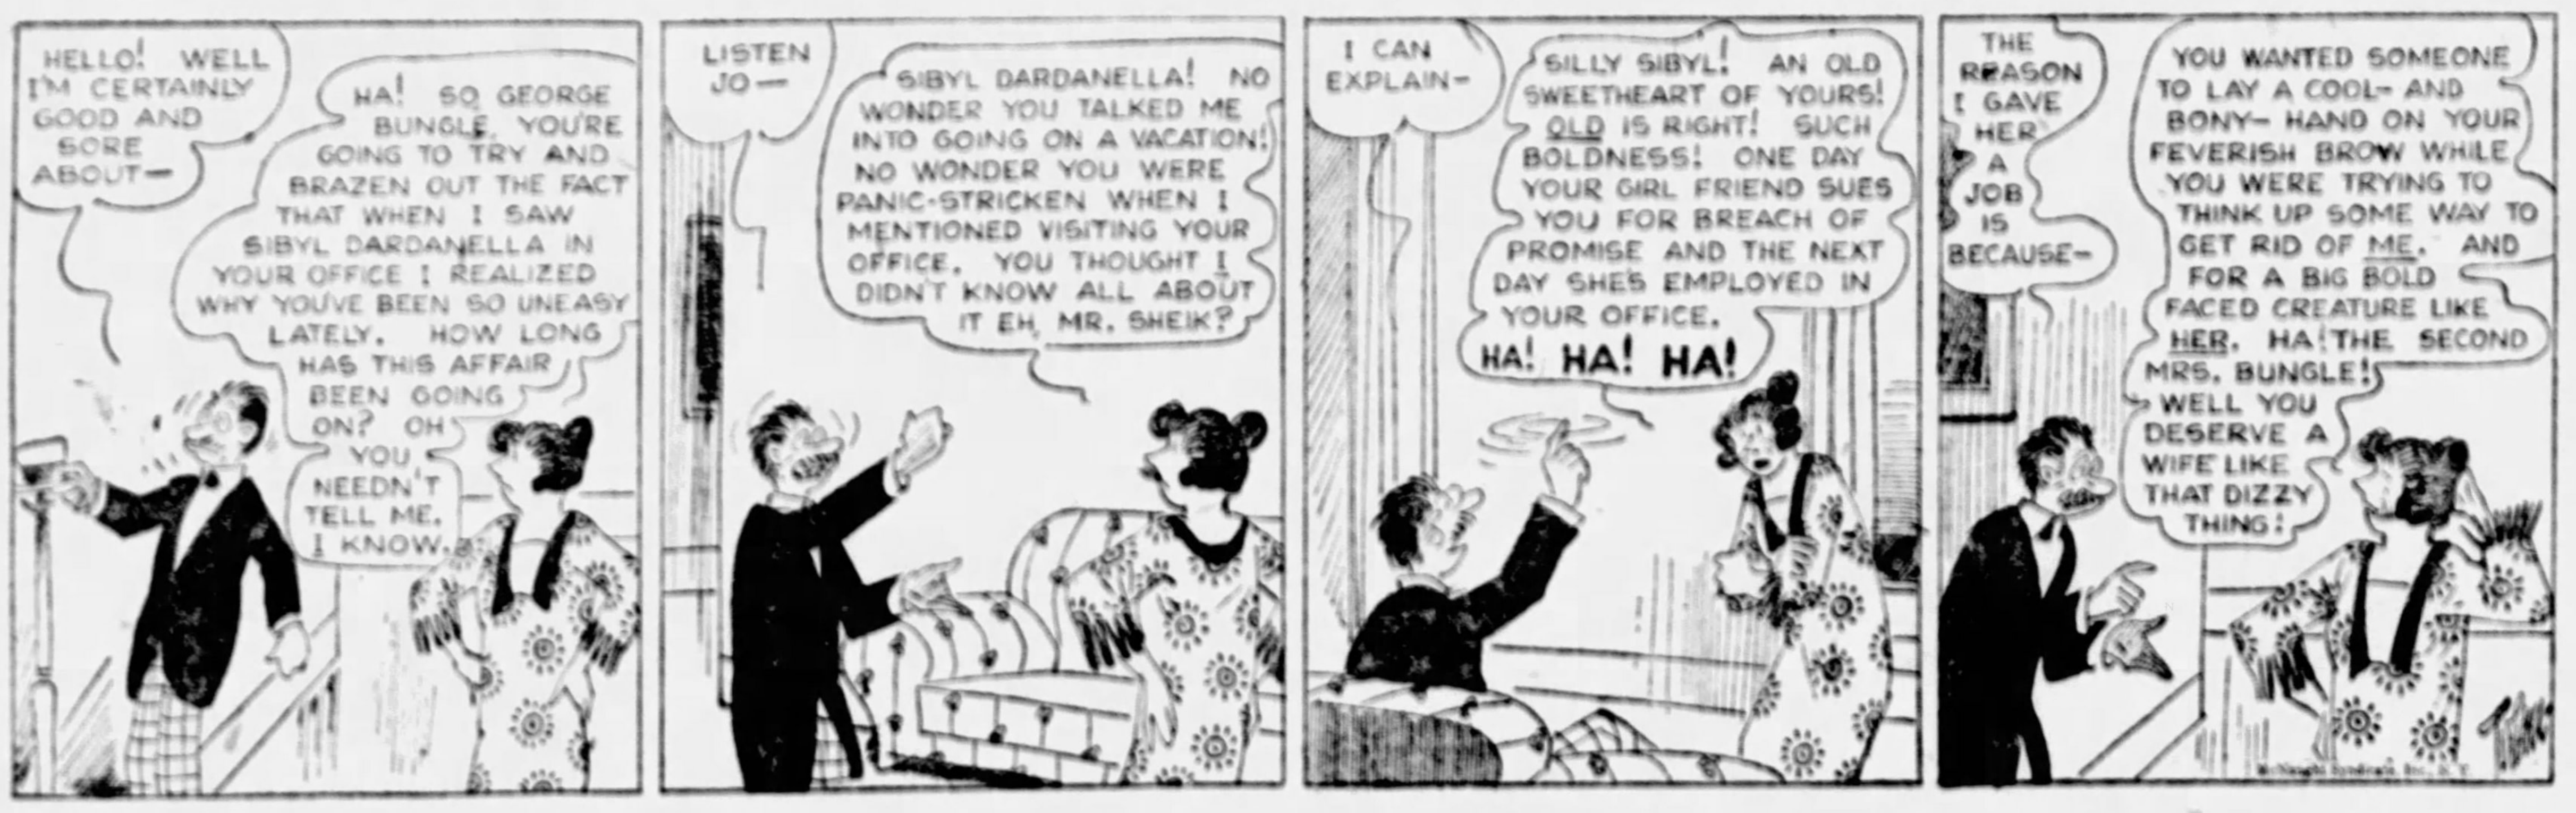
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

The Colonel Just Will Interrupt His Wife



HELLO! WELL I'M CERTAINLY GOOD AND SORE ABOUT—
HA! SO GEORGE BUNGLE, YOU'RE GOING TO TRY AND BRAZEN OUT THE FACT THAT WHEN I SAW SIBYL DARDANELLA IN YOUR OFFICE I REALIZED WHY YOU'VE BEEN SO UNEASY LATELY. HOW LONG HAS THIS AFFAIR BEEN GOING ON? OH YOU NEEDN'T TELL ME, I KNOW.
LISTEN JO—
SIBYL DARDANELLA! NO WONDER YOU TALKED ME INTO GOING ON A VACATION! NO WONDER YOU WERE PANIC-STRICKEN WHEN I MENTIONED VISITING YOUR OFFICE. YOU THOUGHT I DIDN'T KNOW ALL ABOUT IT EH, MR. SHEIK?
I CAN EXPLAIN—
SILLY SIBYL! AN OLD SWEETHEART OF YOURS! OLD IS RIGHT! SUCH BOLDNESS! ONE DAY YOUR GIRL FRIEND SUES YOU FOR BREACH OF PROMISE AND THE NEXT DAY SHE'S EMPLOYED IN YOUR OFFICE. HA! HA! HA!
THE REASON I GAVE HER A JOB IS BECAUSE—
YOU WANTED SOMEONE TO LAY A COOL- AND BONY- HAND ON YOUR FEVERISH BROW WHILE YOU WERE TRYING TO THINK UP SOME WAY TO GET RID OF ME, AND FOR A BIG BOLD FACED CREATURE LIKE HER. HA! THE SECOND MRS. BUNGLE! WELL YOU DESERVE A WIFE LIKE THAT DIZZY THING!

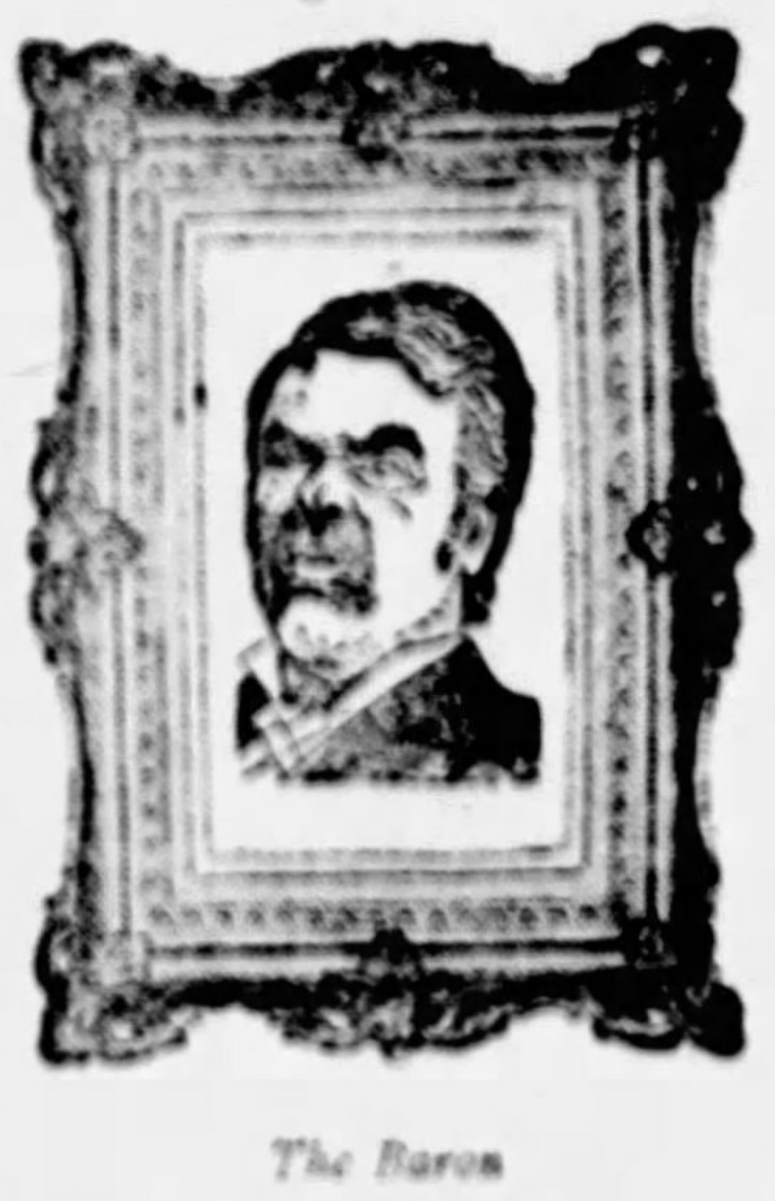
BARON FIDGETS AT DOOR



The Baron

Despite her heavy laden heart, when she thought how daffy the English Baron was over her . . or . . was he just daffy?

She argued with herself pro and con. What to do!

If she married the palsied gink—

Love nevermore will touch my wasteful heart,
Existence needs be very bleak and cold,
After long years, when I am gray
and old,
With neither home nor children*,

Once a wife
I will forget the sorrow of my life,
So my mind argued, and sad heart
heard,

But made no comment.

Of course, the Baron grew impatient. He would stand ringing the doorbell and pawing the doorsill with one foot, while Maurine, within, paced back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and and forth.

(Ho! Hum! If you are a newcomer in our city, let us hasten to explain that this is a review of 1901's classic poem, "Maurine.")

THIS WAGGISH WORLD

by Roy K. Moulton

DURING the war the Frenchmen learned how to charge and they have never givien up the habit. Then they charged the Germans. Now they are charging the Americans—the doughboys. They go over there doughboys. When they come back they are still the boys, but without the dough. The American Legion has learned that the French dry-cleaning system is perfect. In the old days the French command was "Fix bayonets!" Now it is "Fix prices!"

ONE of the boys took a thousand of the best and brightest over with him and expected they would see him through. He spent them all the first week and had to come home before the convention started. The only true friend the American pilgrim has in France is his return ticket. And it is well to keep that carefully concealed in a secret panel in the old B. V. D.'s.

THE former Kaiser, in an interview, said there will be another great war in Europe before 1937. But, if so, there are a lot of perfectly good soldiers now being "entertained" in Paris who will not attend that war. A lot of them are now wondering why they attended the last one.

So many SOS calls for financial assistance are arriving in America from the doughless doughboys that the Frenchmen themselves have not had a chance to send any. Americans will help their own relatives first.

The French statesmen now ask complete reciprocity in tariff. If the French Legion ever holds its reunion over here, they will get it, and no mistake.

IT is said the average person going to the Paris convention takes $1,000. Some of them chose the Paris trip instead of going to the fight in Chicago.

A thousand dollars in Paris is as lasting as a clean collar in Cleveland—if you are an American. If you are a Frenchman, it will keep you a lifetime. One buddy paid $10 to see "the tomb of Sarcophagus the great Greek Philosopher," which he learned later was a subway kiosk.

Lindbergh is the only man from America who ever landed in France sensibly. All he had was his overalls. By dint of much dodging and great diplomacy he saved those.

THE Salvation Army has got the old doughnut guns going again and is trying to feed the buddies at home prices. The Knights of Columbus have resumed their wartime service stations where food is furnished free. The Hartford Lunch and other American caravanseries are keeping down to Topeka and Oshkosh prices and it looks as though, if the Americans all pull together, that way, maybe some of the delegates will be able to stay to the finish of the convention.

They say America's part in the war was expensive, but it didn't have much on America's part in a Paris convention.

Still and all, La Belle France is going to make one grand gesture of friendship toward America. She is going to make Mayor Jimmy Walker a Chevrolet of the Legion of Honor or something. Vive la Locomobile.

And it won't cost her a nickel.

ON "THE BIG MYSTERY"

If GIRLS could only tell
The TRUTH about
WHAT attracted them
To their various BEAUX,
Or their different
HUSBANDS, men would Probably EXPIRE forth
SHOCK. FEW men are WISE
Enough to know WHY women
Love them,
And only FOOLS try
To GUESS. Probably the Most USUAL reason is Just that girls want to LOVE—someone.
LOVE is supposed to
Be an ART, but to the YOUNG it is more
Often an invigorator,
And, like the morning
DAILY DOZEN, there is Quite a little FAITH
MIXED up in it,
The REASON why any Woman should LOVE
Any man is a MYSTERY
And should REMAIN so,
For if she ever TOLD HIM, he would probably Be HORRIFIED
To think she could be
So STUPID.

A Difference In Faces

The Face Reflects the Mind.

THE YOUNG LEADER IN CHINA—GENERAL CHIANG KAI-SHEK, AND TWO SOLDIERS.

Above, three Chinese, and one look tells you which is the REAL man. The man in the middle, standing at the entrance to the Ming Tombs, where many Chinese Emperors lie buried, is a man of power. Perhaps he is thinking that one day HE will lie in the tomb of the first founder of the Kai-Shek dynasty.

The young man in Chinese costume, with firm jaw and high forehead, is, in spite of his youth, one of the ablest China has had in the Chinese national movement. He found his Communist associates and Russian advisers, whom he used at first, a disadvantage, and got rid of them.

He is accompanied in his visit to the Ming Tombs by two of his Chinese soldiers.

In the face of the young general you see every possibility of victory. In the other two faces you see, quite clearly, NOTHING AT ALL.

Study faces, especially when you FIRST meet men or women. Study the eye, the general expression; they tell the story of the mind back of the face. It is for us to READ the story.

That reading is important for those that select business associates, employes for important work, and especially for those that select their future husband or wife.

American Ships Should Carry America's Sea Trade

The United States today exports forty-eight hundred million dollars worth of goods a year more than any other country in the world.

Nevertheless, no other great nation ships so few of its exports under its own flag. Three-quarters of our foreign trade is carried by vessels of other nations.

We had one severe lesson in the war-time losses that come to a country without a merchant marine. When war was declared the dominant British sea power chased the German ships off the seas. The British ships were commandeered by the British navy. That is, the British and German carriers upon whom our people were dependent, suddenly quit the service.

Our export trade was ruined. Foodstuffs and cotton, denied their foreign outlet, were thrown back upon the domestic market to depress prices and ruin farmers in the South and West. Higher ocean freight rates were charged by the few vessels that were available. It is estimated that in the first year of the war we paid five hundred million dollars more in freights than we should have paid if we had had our own ships. The loss to our producers in reduced farm prices alone was a billion dollars more.

We are a peaceable nation. There is no reason why our foreign commerce should be interrupted whenever two other nations go to war. That danger will always confront us until [illegible] adequate merchant marine of our own.

[illegible]ver, we need our own ships in peace as well as in war. [illegible] merchant would entrust the delivery of his merchandise to a fleet of wagons owned by his competitor. Instead, he owns his own wagons and does his own delivering. So we have got to do, on the seas.

The last session of Congress closed before a vote could be had on the bill of Senator Jones, of Washington, providing for further development of the merchant marine. Among other provisions, it authorizes the shipping board to construct new vessels to take the place of old vessels wearing out, and to build new vessels to complete the merchant fleet.

Unless this replacement program is carried on, we shall soon have no government-owned merchant marine—and it is the government-owned merchant marine which, with the exception of a few routes, is keeping our flag on the seas.

Brigadier General A. C. Dalton, president of the government's merchant fleet corporation, announces that in the last 12 months he made a profit of $371,085 from operating the Leviathan and four other ships out of New York in the transatlantic passenger service. General Dalton wants two other passenger ships of the Leviathan type, so that the three together can maintain a weekly service across the Atlantic. His request should certainly be included in the replacement and expansion program to be recommended to Congress by the shipping board.

Finally, high speed merchant ships are needed as fleet auxiliaries in war time. Without them the national defense is not complete.

Nobody needs a merchant marine more than the agricultural producers of the West and the South, though they live inland and never see the ships that serve them. It looks as if their representatives in Congress are at last ready to vote the money to keep an adequate merchant marine in service. Senator Jones' bill should pass.

2. Proportional representation in the United States Senate, no state to have less than two Senators. Legislation to enforce prompt constitutional reapportionment in the House of Representatives.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal powers to abolish illiteracy in the United States under a Secretary of Education.
5. Election of Congress in November. Installation on the 1st of January following. Inauguration of the President 1st of January next after November election.

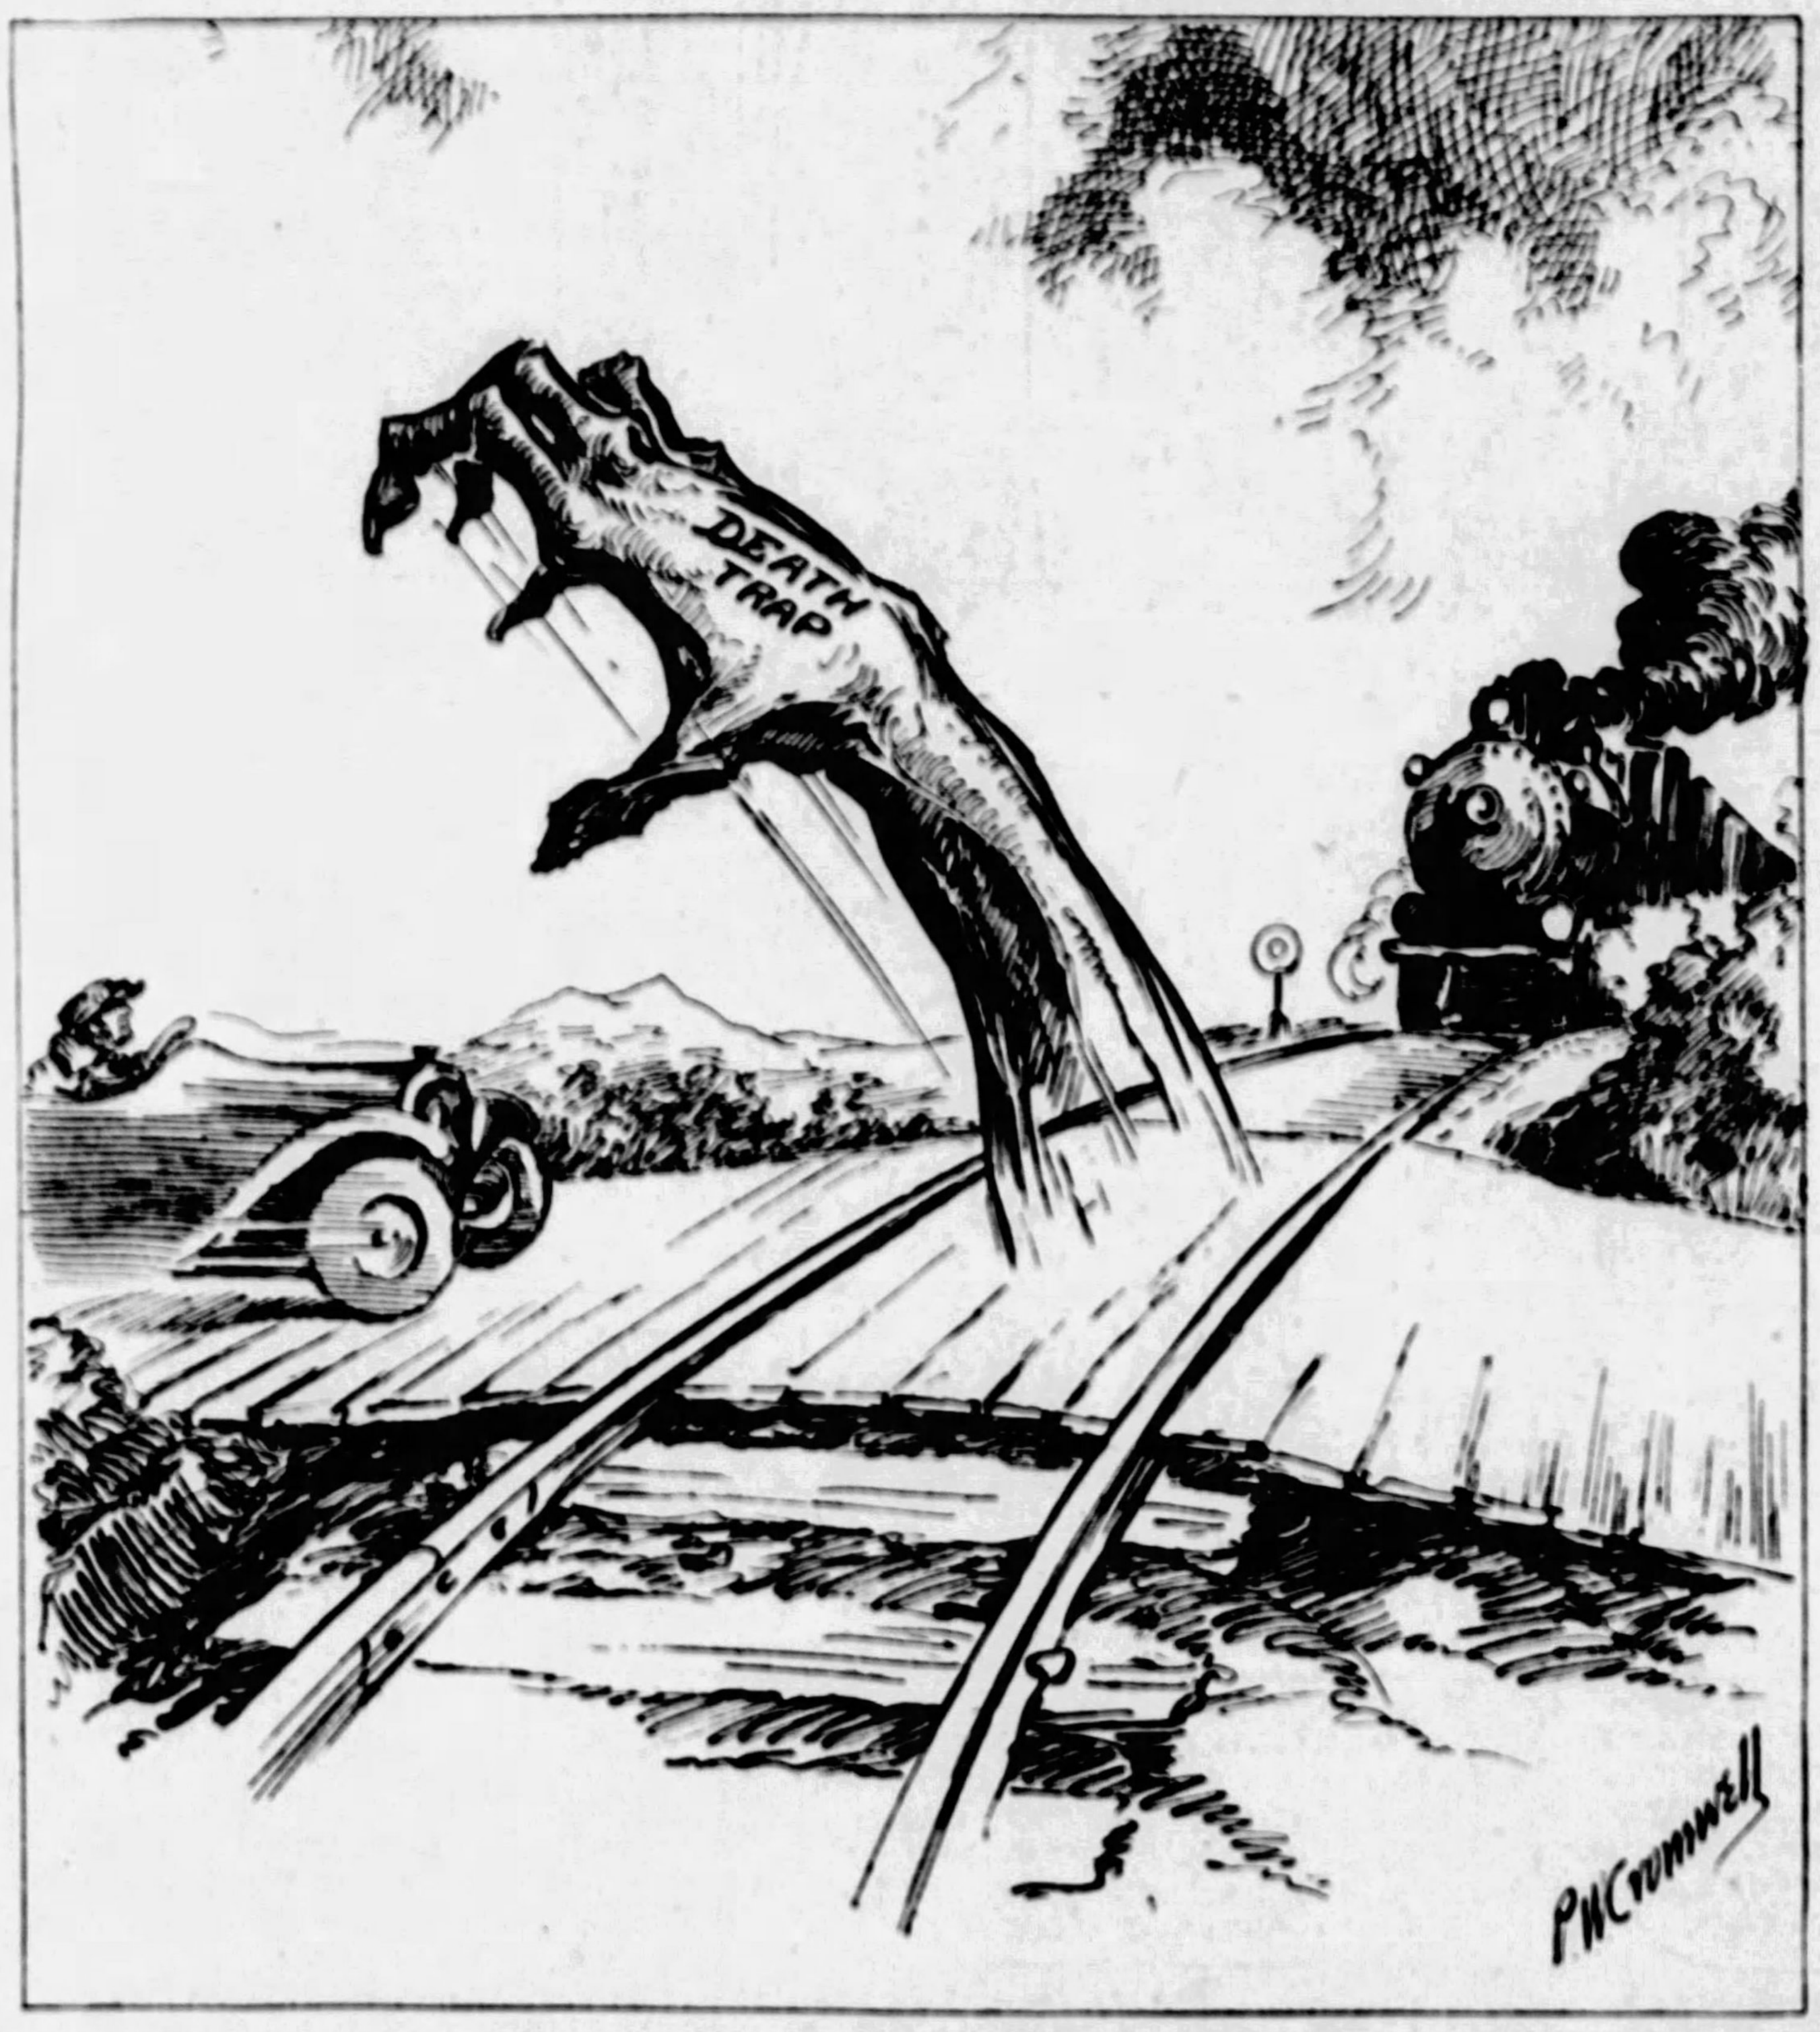
THE GRADE CROSSING



Garrett P Serviss Says:

Two Days

"I read in a book that a complete rotation of the earth requires twenty-three hours fifty-six minutes, four seconds. Where does the earth gain the rest of the 236 seconds to make it twenty-four hours?"—J. A. H.

HOURS, minutes and seconds are only successive divisions of the period of time that the earth takes to make one rotation on its axis. That rotation is the basis of all our reckoning of time.

Now to tell when the earth has completed such a rotation we must look at something outside the earth.

But the only fixed, or nearly fixed, objects that we can find outside the earth are the heavenly bodies, such as the stars, the sun and the moon. We rule the moon out for this purpose because it has too rapid a motion around the earth. There remain the sun and the stars, either of which we can use to measure the period of the earth's rotation.

The stars give the most accurate result because their positions in the sky as seen from the earth are practically fixed. So, if we choose some particular star, and begin to reckon the time of the earth's rotation from the instant when that star appears on the meridian we know that the next time the same star is on the meridian the earth must have made one complete turn on its axis.

We then divide this period into twenty-four parts calling each part an hour. One-sixtieth of an hour we call a minute, and one sixtieth of a minute we call a second. The total period we call one sidereal (star) day. The sidereal day is useful to astronomers in their calculations, but it is not suitable for use in civil life, because it does not keep step with the movements of the sun.

Accordingly another measure of the period of the earth's rotation is made by noting two successive appearances of the sun on the meridian. Now, in consequence of the earth's annual revolution around the sun, the position of the sun in the heavens shifts gradually around in the same direction in which the earth turns. So if we start at the moment when the sun is on the meridian we find that before the earth has turned far enough to bring it again on the meridian the sun has perceptibly changed its place in the sky, going forward about one 365th of a complete circuit of the heavens.

In consequence of this continual advance of the sun in the sky, which compels the earth to turn a little farther in order to bring the sun again on the meridian than it has to turn in order to bring back a fixed star to the same meridian, the period of rotation is a little longer when measured by the sun than when measured by a star. But it is called a day just the same, and is divided, like the sidereal day, into twenty-four hours, etc. This "solar" day is the one that we ordinarily use.

Now, although the two kinds of day have each twenty-four of their own hours, the hours of the solar day are a trifle longer than those of the sidereal day and when the differences are summed up for a complete rotation it is found that twenty-four solar hours are equal to twenty-four hours, three minutes, fifty-six seconds of sidereal time; while twenty-four hours of sidereal time are equal to twenty-three hours, fifty-six minutes, four seconds of solar. That, you perceive, is where the 236 extra seconds that puzzle you come from.

Expensive Guests

IF YOU are not sure that your city relatives can afford to entertain you extensively you should insist upon "Dutch treat" when you go to visit them in the large city.

If you live in a village or small city you may not realize the cost of dinners at leading hotels and seats at the best theaters.

You may think it is not much financial drain to entertain you.

But all sorts of entertainment in a city are expensive.

Why don't you make some inquiries and be familiar with the cost of pleasures in which you would like to indulge in the big city?

Unless you can reciprocate in a way to cut down the outlays of your city relatives while you visit them you should not permit them to be extravagant in the entertainment they provide for you.

You are not the only one who visit the city folk.

Others come in on them much as you do, and sometimes they lap over in a distressing way.

In a year's time the amount spent on entertaining out-of-town relatives makes a big drain on the city family's income.

Old Friendships

OLD friendships lend a sweetness to the day that newer loves and ties cannot impart, as well known songs that through the twilight stray may be more dear than rarer music's art. For, added to the gladness of today with which we greet the friends of other years, there comes the thought of joys long passed away, whose poignant memories bring smiles and tears. So dear, so near, and yet so far they seem, beyond the changeless barriers of time, those by-gone days might only be a dream of starry realms, remote and half-sublime. They keep alight bright fires that long have burned, and truth, and by their glow are other joys discerned, the bloom and freshness of our vanished youth.

Ye Towne Gossip

by K. C. B.

K. C. B.: A few days ago you aired a complaint about the children who constantly lost the top of the toothpaste tube. Our children do it, too, when they use the paste—but what I want to know is how do you get them to brush their teeth?
M. C. M.

DEAR M. C. M.

THAT ALL they do.

IS LOSE THE caps.

FOR THEY squeeze out the paste.

ALL OVER the wash bowl.

AND I'LL go in.

AND SEE IT there.

AND SAY to them.

"LOOKIT THAT bowl!"

AND THEY'LL lookit the bowl.

AND PROBABLY ASK.

* * *

"WHAT'S THE matter with it?"

AND I'LL take a wash rag.

AND WASH off the paste.

AND SAY to them.

"LOOKIT IT now."

AND THEN I'll ask.

"DO YOU see a difference?"

AND THEY'LL say no.

AND THEN I'LL scream.

AND GO on away.

AND ABOUT how I trained them.

TO BRUSH their teeth.

IT'S A long, long story.

AND I used to go in.

AND LOOK at their brushes.

AND RUN my thumbs.

THE LENGTH of the bristles.

AND IF they snapped back.

THE BRUSH hadn't been used.

AND IF they didn't.

IT HAD been used.

AND THEY found that out.

AND SOAKED their brushes.

AT ANY odd moment.

THEY'D THINK of it.

AND THEN I told them.

THEIR TEETH would come out.

IF THEY didn't brush them.

AND IT worried the boy.

AND MORNING and night.

HE BRUSHED his teeth.

FOR A couple of weeks.

AND THEN two came out.

AND THAT crabbed that.

BUT I kept on trying.

AND FIRST thing I knew.

IT BECAME a habit.

WITH BOTH of them.

AND NOT any more.

DO I mention it.

FOR FEAR they'll remember.

I MADE them do it.

AND WILL quit again.

I THANK you.

To Your Friends in Other Cities

O. O. McINTYRE

In California

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—The movie people run in a pack. They mingle little with those outside their gelatinous guild. The nature of their business affords much idleness, but when they work the grind is severe. I have met three who have not worked more than three months in a year.

And each draws a salary equaling or surpassing our President. They are vain folk who like to talk about themselves, yet it seems to me they are very human and likable. They strut with a self-consciousness at public functions, but no more so than many legitimate players.

They live on a grand scale with Jap valets, imported owl-eyed English butlers with British accents and chic French maids. A fad is to have a "personal masseur." The yen to make a splurge has resulted in financial security for many, for in buying homes the property values have made astonishing increases.

The movies bring to Los Angeles thousands who are willing to work at their trades for less money because they feel they have a chance to cop important money in the movies. A hair dressing parlor, for instance, in Beverly, closed this week when the proprietor and three cutters got their chance.

Old timers call themselves "L. A. boys." They are mostly from New York, having been stock or vaudeville actors when the movies were in infancy. An old timer who used to do a trick bicycle act in vaudeville, showed me a deed to a $400,000 home. He has been here 10 years and was never starred.

Had they clung to Broadway they would likely be living from hand to mouth or spending dreary hours in casting agencies. But most of them long for the big town. They look forward eagerly each week to the arrival of Variety, the theatrical paper, for Broadway news.

The old timers hang together and watch the new who represent the jazz spirit of the time. There is a sort of outlaw organization known as Poverty Row where stars out of work go and appear in hurriedly made movies that are sold to independent houses. An east side New Yorker is making a fortune out of the venture.

Almost every chauffeur here has a portable radio in his car. Nearly all travel is by motor and waits are long so he unpacks his instrument and is entertained during inactivity. Much radio stuff is local advertising.

A second-hand car is known as a "re-possessed car." And on Wilshire boulevard is a "Pantitorium," offering "moth insurance." Peanut and popcorn wagons are plentiful and gaudy affairs. One has an electric sign at night which may be seen for several blocks.

* * *

The big Hollywood Bowl is an outdoor place for symphony concerts with a natural scenic background of hills. It is about the only spot in America where a man can hear high-brow music while smoking a low-brow cigar.

* * *

The evening meal is between five and six o'clock and Los Angeles and Hollywood go to bed early. In the past year night life has almost completely faded. There are a few dance places open, but they are deserted before midnight as a rule. It is a morning town and the bustle is marked until lunch time when a larger percentage of the population drifts off to one of the some 30 golf courses.

* * *

There is little of the high pressure effort to sell real estate there was a year ago. Middle aged ladies will still approach you in public parks with offers of free rides to see this and that sub-division, but the racket is such an old one few avail themselves. For each passenger they secure they are paid a dollar whether the prospect buys or not. But Los Angeles real estate values have spoken for themselves. Almost anyone who buys within a radius of 20 miles from the heart of the city and holds on to it for a few years is likely to realize fair profit and in some instances be made rich. Real estate men have discouraged ballyhoo methods and put the business on a more dignified basis.

* * *

I believe many other cities could do what Los Angeles has done by merely "selling them selves." I know a number of cities just as attractive, but the world hears little about them.

Americans

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Those people who have the best right and title to call themselves native Americans are the Indians.

A great many people believe that the Indians are Asiatic stock, who wandered to this country through Alaska. However that may be, they arrived here a long while before the white man did and were the real first settlers, if they can be called settlers.

Their mode of life comprises many interesting characteristics. They are an outdoor people and live by hunting and fishing. Many movements, such as the Woodcraft, hark back to Indian customs in their effort to teach the young people the advantage of outdoor life.

Every race is interested in preserving all that it can of their autochthonous civilization. The Germans have a proper pride in their Teutonic ancestry and legends, such as are played upon in the Wagner operas. There is a considerable movement for the preservation of Gaelic speech or the original speech in Ireland, while the Welsh reluctantly gave up their Welsh tongue. Americans of today should give more heed to the Indian. He had his art, his code of morals and his mode of life, which are all of extreme interest.

The movement has received the commendation of the Federal authorities in charge of Indian reservations who have not always been as considerate of the Indian as they should. Many prominent public-spirited citizens, especially women, are behind the enterprise.

The Indians had some crafts, such as the making of jewelry, basket weaving and the manufacture of blankets which have been handed down from father to son in their tribes. There is danger of these arts being lost unless they are fostered in some way.

Various tribes from all over the country and from Mexico will send representatives to this fiesta who will bring their handiwork and also exhibit their ceremonial customs.

It is hoped that this proposal will be favorably accepted throughout the country and will receive its proper attention.

Isn't It So?

All the world's a stage, and many a man is cast for a thinking part who never had a thought in his life.

When we do deep injury to another, it sticks up out of the past like a sore thumb.

All the world's a stage, and it is pretty much a continuous performance.

A man cannot compliment a woman by telling her she has thick ankles.

It is much easier to take things as they come than to part with them as they go.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

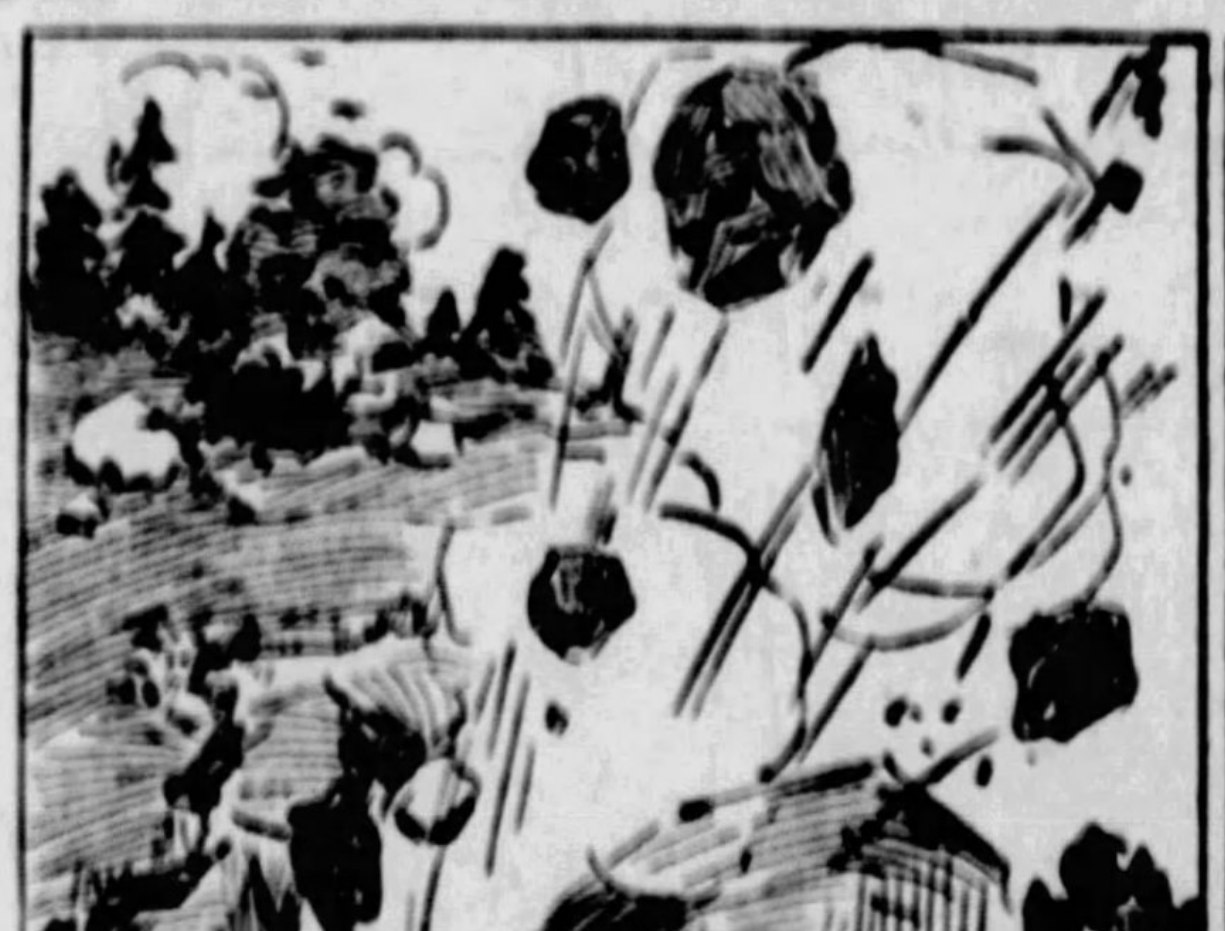
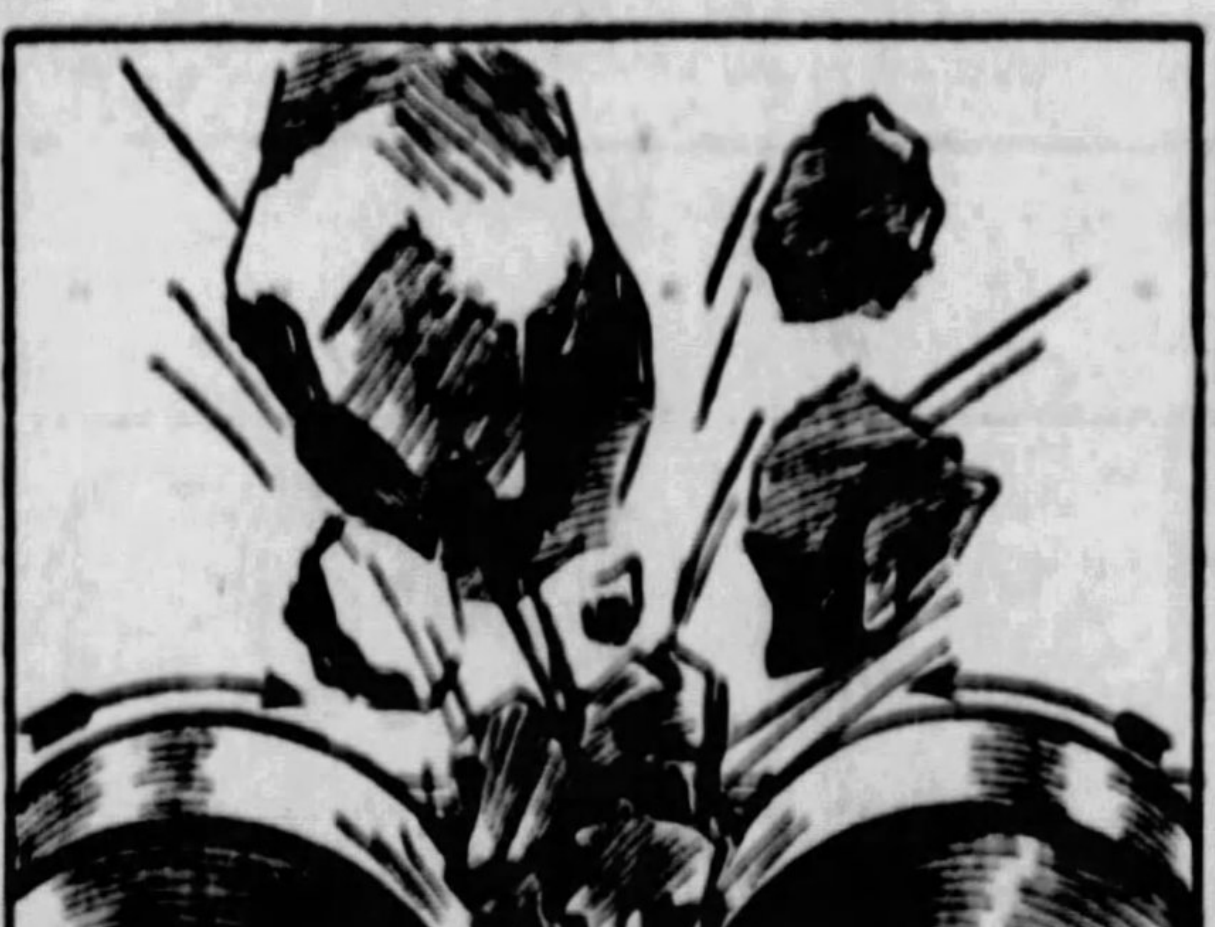
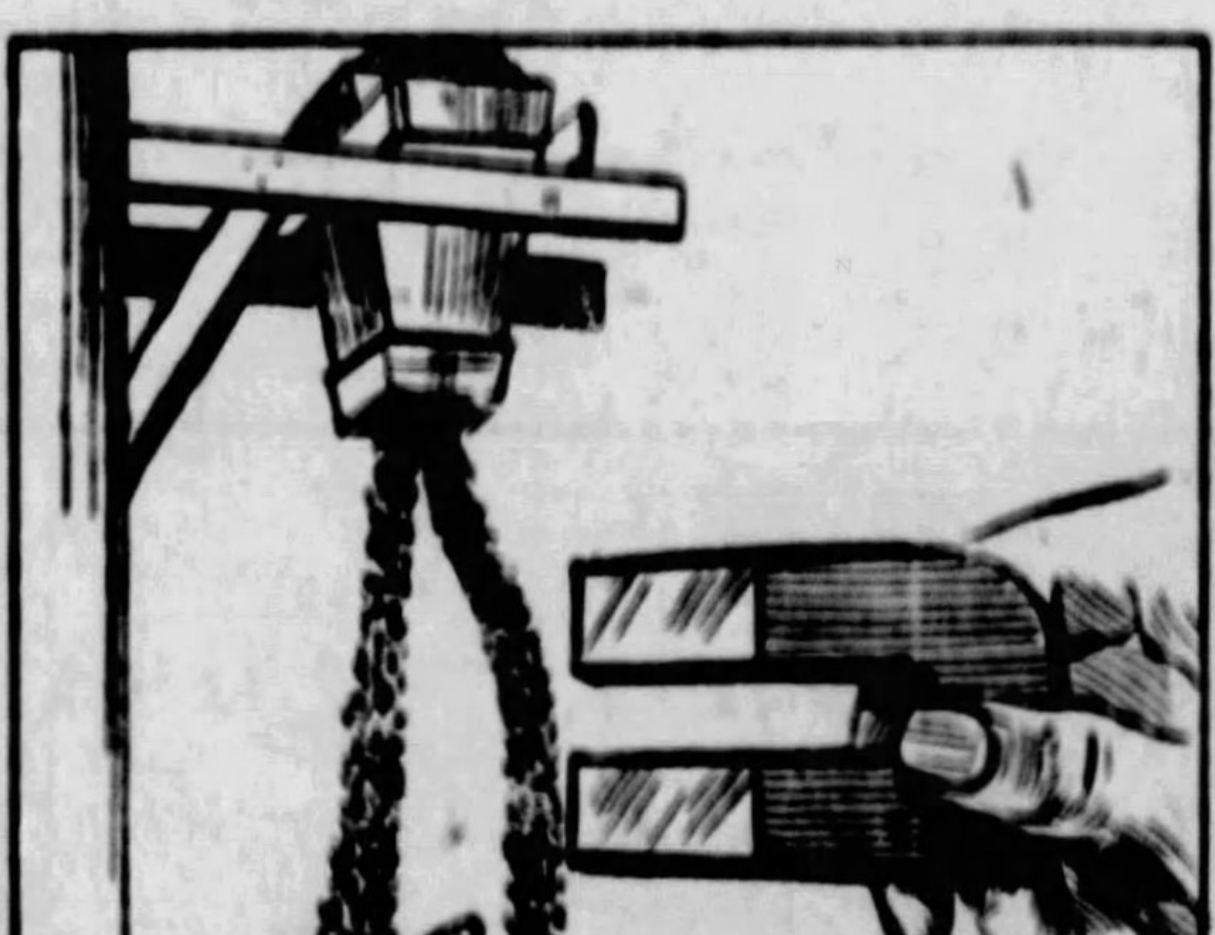
Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



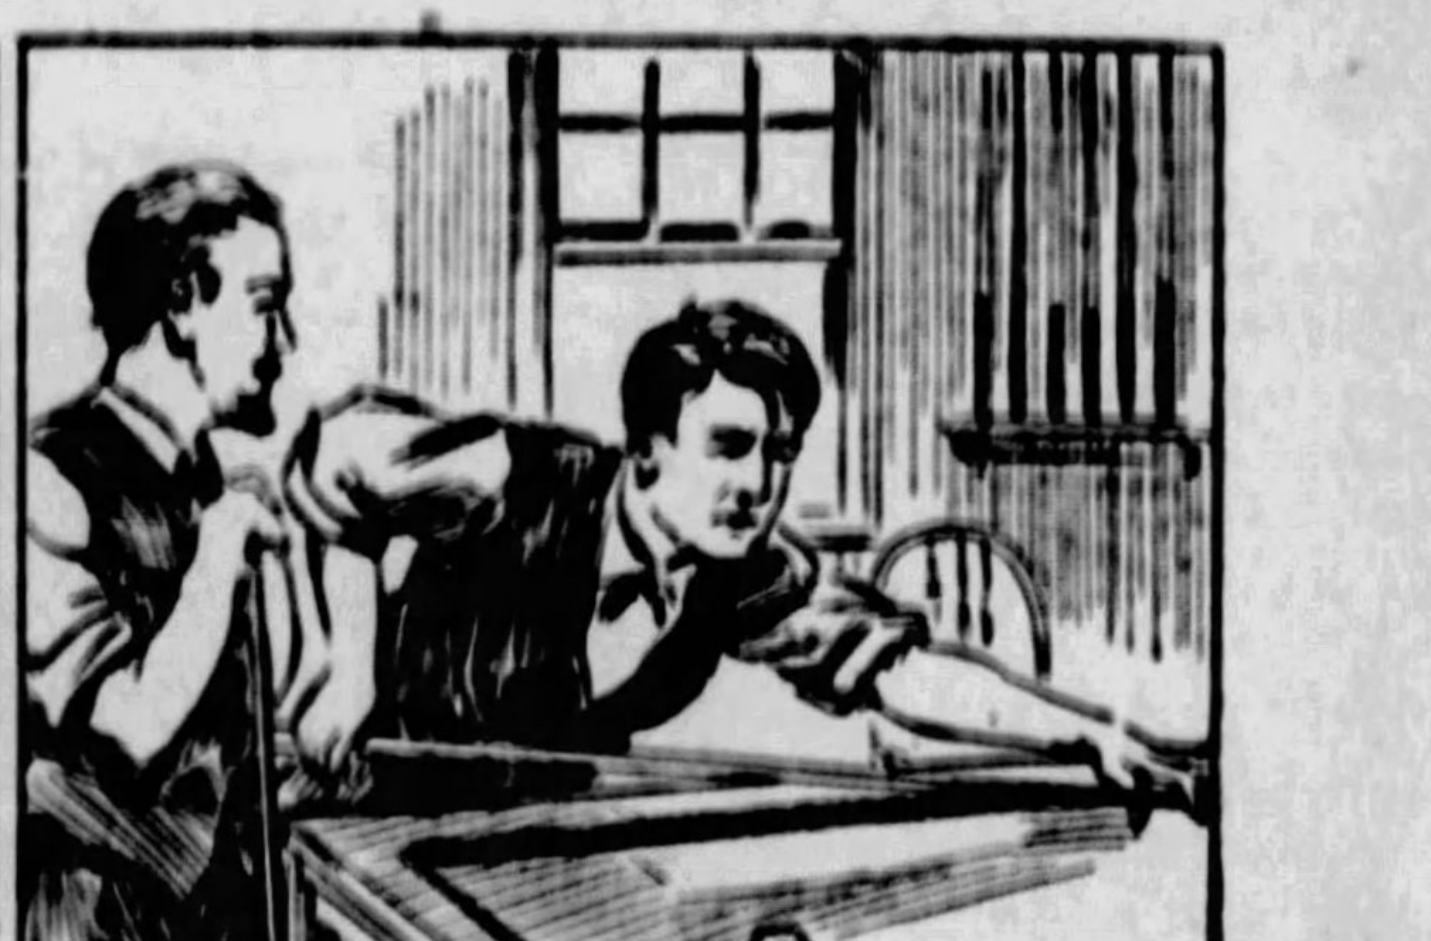
EVERYTHING at the Edison ore-concentrating plant was done on a gigantic scale. Three-inch holes twenty feet deep in the mountainside were filled with dynamite. A single blast would dislodge thirty-five thousand tons of rock. Steam shovels scooped this up and loaded it on cars, which carried it to the giant crushing rolls.



THE giant rolls were made of solid cast iron, six feet in diameter and five feet long, and faced with chilled-iron plates. They traveled at terrific speed and crushed boulders weighing six tons. Their power is illustrated by the fact that pieces of rock weighing half a ton would shoot into the air twenty-five feet.



EDISON'S magnetic ore-separation principle is symbolized by this sketch. A stream of finely ground ore was allowed to flow from a container. When a magnet was placed at a certain distance from the stream it would draw the iron particles away. They would fall on one side of a division, the waste on the other side.



EDISON'S associate in those days was W. S. Mallory, who liked billiards. Edison cares little for any games, but one night at his home he asked Mallory to play billiards. Edison missed his first shot, but kept at it fifteen minutes until he made it. Then he said: "I don't want to play any more." (Continued Monday.)
